New Allotments Made to Influence House, He Charges.

Republicans Offer State Relief Plan

Roosevelt Sets 2 Weeks to Put Spending in High Gear.

By Robert C. Albright.

House opponents of the $4,512,000,000 spending-lending recovery program charged last night that the Public Works Administration is releasing long-frozen PWA funds throughout the country to "soften" opposition to the pump-priming measure.

"For over six months the PWA has been announcing it has no funds to allot," said Representative John Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee. "Now it has found the money and is using it to influence votes."

At the Public Works Administration, where $3,119,000 was allotted last week for 58 scattered school projects, officials denied any "political significance" can be attached to the action. The allotments mean only that outlays stopped last August, in furtherance of Administration economy aims, have been resumed, they said.

Program in High Gear.

As the House Appropriations Committee scheduled hearings today on the $1,250,000,000 relief section of the program, President Roosevelt told reporters of plans for high-gear launching of the new recovery drive immediately after Congress acts.

To avoid any delay in getting under way, the President said he will hold a series of conferences over the next two weeks with Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, officials of the Public Works Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the National Youth Administration, the Bureau of Public Roads and others.

Mr. Roosevelt told reporters not to be surprised if they saw a long

G. A. O. Indicates 3,000 Employes May Be Dropped

Some 3,000 temporary employes of the General Accounting Office were told yesterday to take their annual vacations before June 30 or take the chance of losing them altogether.

This order was based on the possibility the President's $4,500,000,000 pump-priming program might fail of acceptance by Congress. Appointments of the temporary employes are limited to the end of June.

Observers saw in this the implication that should the measure fail, these emergency workers in the G. A. O.—and probably those elsewhere in the Federal service—would be of necessity dropped because of lack of funds.

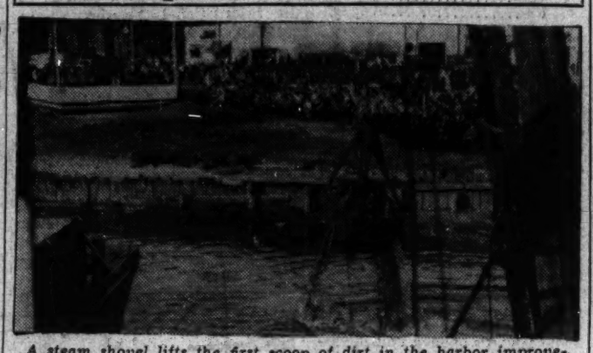
Work Begun on Huge Project To Improve D. C. Waterfront



A steam shovel lifts the first scoop of dirt in the harbor improvement project which got under way here yesterday.

The Potomac River, celebrated in verse, song and history, began acquiring a more worthy shoreline in Washington yesterday after 30 years of neglect.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, stood on a platform at Tenth and Water streets southwest. He pressed a button, and presently a clam-like steam shovel, painted a gaudy yellow, began scooping muck from the historic river. The crowd cheered.

That was the beginning of a $1,650,000 harbor project that will transform the waterfront along the Washington Channel. Dilapidated shacks will come down and neat structures of colonial architecture will take their place. There will be yacht basins with berths for 286 pleasure craft. Rickety wooden piers will be supplanted by piers of concrete. The harbor police and the harbor firemen will have one of them and also new colonial-style headquarters. Some day the oft-denounced morgue, which stands nearby, will be removed.

A handsome boulevard, separated from Water street by "islands" of grass and shrubbery, will extend along the waterfront from Highway Bridge to the Army War College.

The result will be a waterfront worthy of a National Capital that

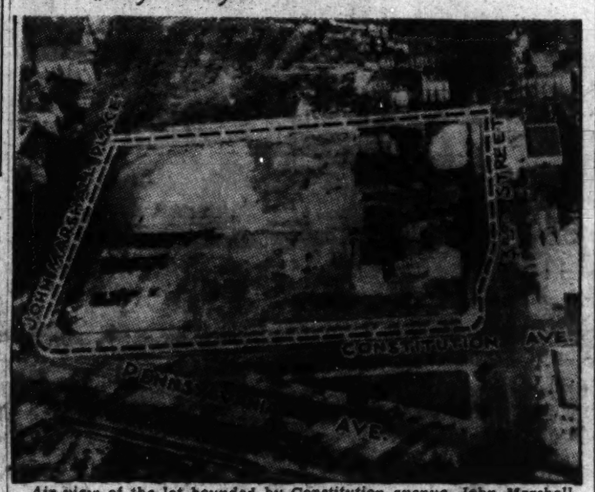
Connally to Offer Bill Today For $9,000,000 Hall



Air view of the lot bounded by Constitution avenue, John Marshall place and Third street northwest chosen yesterday by the Capital Auditorium Commission for a $9,000,000 auditorium.

A bill to provide the Capital with a $9,000,000 auditorium with seating accommodations for nearly 16,000 will be introduced in the Senate today by Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the public buildings and grounds committee.

Plans for the auditorium were approved yesterday by a commission headed by Interior Secretary Ickes after agitation to give the city roofed facilities for large gatherings, dating from the "pneumonia" inauguration of 1937.

The commission recommended that the auditorium occupy a site fronting Constitution avenue, John Marshall place and Third street northwest, although, almost as soon as the decision was made public, probable future controversy over the site selection was forecast by Commissioner Hazen who called it a "mistake."

The selected auditorium site is part of the municipal center area owned by the District government. "The District," said Senator Connally, will be asked to donate the land and the Federal Government will construct the building.

Hazen, however, said the new auditorium should be built in an outlying section of the city.

"But if the Federal Government is willing to provide the building,"

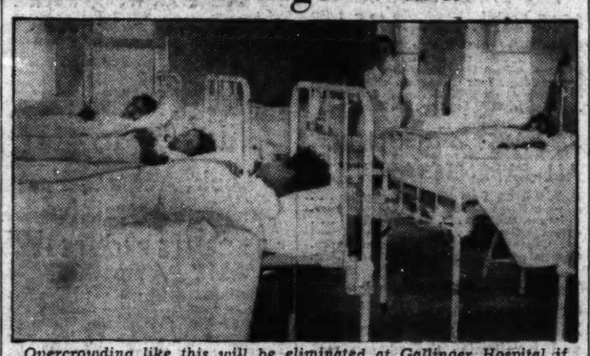
PWA Grants 2 Court Buildings And New Gallinger Ward



Overcrowding like this will be eliminated at Gallinger Hospital if PWA funds are granted for a new hospital. The project was approved yesterday.

Grants and loans for a 300-bed addition for Gallinger Hospital and new D. C. Municipal and Juvenile Court buildings were approved by the Public Works Administration yesterday among more than 2,000 projects.

The money will not be made available, the PWA specified, until Congress acts upon the President's new recovery-spending program and provision is made for the District to finance its share of the work.

The Gallinger Hospital addition, designed to relieve overcrowded conditions, according to Dr. Edgar A. Bococ, superintendent, will fill a "crying need," housing patients now occupying cramped spaces.

The dilapidated Juvenile and Municipal Court buildings have been District eyesores for many years. Both structures, according to yesterday's PWA announcement, are "wholly inadequate . . . making . . . proper and dignified functioning of these courts practically impossible."

The new Gallinger ward will cost about $750,000, divided between a PWA grant of $225,000 and a loan of $525,000. The Municipal Court building cost of $1,500,000 is to be covered by a grant of $450,000 and a loan of $1,050,000. The $550,000 Juvenile Court cost is divided between a $165,000 grant and $385,000 loan.

Municipal Court plans call for a 3-story structure with 303 feet frontage. The Juvenile Court would be a 4-story building with 132-foot frontage.

Daladier Woos Britain, U.S.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 19.—Premier Daladier dropped work on his internal decree laws today to concentrate the cabinet's attention on foreign affairs—including, informed quarters said, the idea of seeking closer ties with the United States and Great Britain.

Officials were silent about the report that Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet were going to London April 28 to confer with the British about opening conversations with Washington.

The Van Zeeland report, some quarters said, was the vehicle by which the French and the British hoped to win American economic co-operation.

Asks Trade Pact.

This report, made last January by former Premier Paul Van Zeeland, of Belgium, proposed a pact under which democratic and authoritarian nations alike would collaborate to remove trade barriers, stabilize currencies, consolidate international debts and open up colonies.

Daladier, whose prestige soared this morning when 90 per cent of the 160,000 striking French metal workers returned to work, told his associates that the chain of decree laws he planned would have to wait while he and Bonnet worked on foreign affairs.

Their first job was to complete a French-Italian agreement before the Spanish foreign minister, Julio Alvarez Del Vayo, could use the League of Nations council meeting May 9 as a sounding board for his

Woman Physician Beaten, Robbed In Yard of Home

Beaten about the head and face with the butt of a revolver by two colored bandits, Dr. Nell W. Bartram, woman physician with the Veterans' Administration, was treated last night at Emergency Hospital for lacerations and shock. She lost a wrist watch and jewelry to the thugs, who overlooked a wallet containing an unrevealed amount of money.

Dr. Bartram told police she drove her automobile into the garage at the rear of her home, 1725 Seventeenth street northwest, and was preparing to leave when the two men appeared at the left of the car. Failing to open the door, they rushed to the other side, thrust a revolver through a window and snatched her pocketbook.

The strap gave way and the pocketbook opened, spilling part of its contents on the floor of the car. The bandits then snatched a wrist watch from her arm.

Then, Dr. Bartram said, one of the men struck her in the mouth and head with the butt of the gun.

Rome Treaty Given Praise Of Roosevelt

President Holds Accord Shows Possibility in Peaceful Action.

President Roosevelt formally stated approval yesterday of the sweeping new Anglo-Italian accord which dissolved most causes of friction between the two European powers.

Even as the President said that the new agreement "is proof of the value of peaceful negotiations," several Senators in debate on the "big Navy" bill expressed fears that the United States might have to go to war to maintain the territorial integrity of South America against aggressor nations.

Warns of Air Bases.

In unmistakable warning that Japan, Germany or Italy, through commercial invasion of South America, might establish an air base uncomfortably close to the United States, Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, said:

"I know there is a belief and a strong conviction on the part of our defense offices about South America and the prevention of a potential enemy's getting in there. One of the most effective ways of making a great deal of trouble for us in event of war would be for such an enemy to get an effective base in South America.

"If any country in South America were hostile to us and wanted to give encouragement to a potential enemy they could be very embarrassing and troublesome to us by permitting bases to be set up."

White Fears Europeans.

Sources close to the committee indicated last night that fear of Japanese encroachment in Mexico was what Walsh had in mind after much secret testimony from Navy Department officials.

Senator Wallace White (Republican), of Maine, put the situation very strongly when he reported that his recent three-month tour of Europe had convinced him that "there are three nations in Europe that today have greater influence than the United States in South America, particularly in countries of the eastern seaboard of South America.

"I think there are in those countries in South America greater interests and a greater loyalty to some of these European nations than to the United States.

"I do not consider it beyond the range of possibility that we in this

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, April 19.—President Vargas signed a decree today banning public demonstrations and political activities by foreigners and regulating their institutions.

Foreigners' schools, newspapers and propaganda came under the new regulations.

The use of uniforms and party symbols was forbidden.

This move to control foreign activities was in line with recent measures to restrict Nazis and similar groups.

Brazil contains large colonies of Germans, Italians and Japanese, mostly retaining their own language and customs.

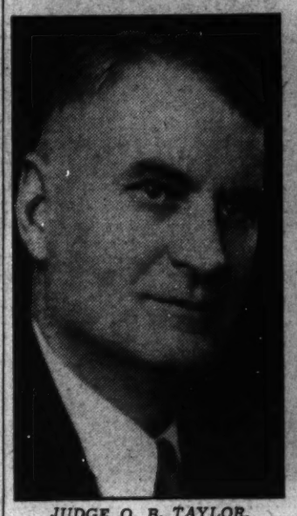
HOLC Counsel Resigns Under Fire



JUDGE O. B. TAYLOR.

HORACE RUSSELL.

Russell Resigns When Charges Are Made on House Floor.

Messages Praised Ability of Lawyer

Church Calls Circulars Boosting Former Colleague Disgraceful.

By Sidney Olson.

Horace Russell, general counsel of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, resigned his position yesterday shortly after his dismissal had been demanded on the floor of the House by Representative Ralph E. Church (Republican), of Illinois.

Church had charged that Russell had franked out at Government expense "a million or more letters" to lawyers and citizens who had HOLC loans, to solicit legal business for Judge O. B. Taylor, who recently resigned as Russell's assistant in the HOLC.

Russell, president of the Federal Bar Association, an organization of attorneys in Government service, explained last night that he had offered his resignation in order to "avoid embarrassing" the HOLC board and its chairman, John H. Fahey.

Resignation Accepted.

Fahey said he couldn't "understand why Russell did this," as he accepted the resignation of the 49-year-old, gray-haired Mississippi-born attorney.

Russell, asked if Church's charges were true, said: "I presume it should be stated there is truth in his charges."

He denied that more than several hundred letters had been franked out, and those only to lawyers employed by the HOLC; admitted that the letter was his own idea, and declared:

"My actions have been in good faith at all times. My conscience is perfectly clear in this matter. I have done nothing in conflict with legal ethics."

Postscripts Added.

The letters written by Russell, sent out on HOLC stationery, praising Judge Taylor's capabilities, emphasized that Taylor as a private lawyer would practice before Government departments, bureaus and commissions and gave his Washington address.

Russell said: "I sent out the letter in an effort to be just to all members of the HOLC staff. The postscript giving Judge Taylor's Washington address was added by a clerk in my office."

He pointed out that the HOLC legal staff is shrinking daily as the work of the agency is being completed, and that he sought only to assist those withdrawing from the service.

Church, wavy-haired, truculent minority member, shouted on the House floor:

"This letter is disgraceful. It is scandalous. It is bureaucracy at its worst. It is nothing more than using the Government for private gain. It violates our laws and it violates the ethics of the legal profession. It is personal advertisement at the taxpayer's expense."

Urges Prosecution.

Church, stipulating that "it is certainly a violation of every rule of good government and common decency for any official to use his position to advertise the services of a member of the bar," said he had received the Russell letter from numerous constituents and added:

"Considering the tone of this letter and the fact that it was written on official stationery, I do not think I would do any injustice to Judge Taylor and Mr. Russell, if I were to say that it appears the firm of Taylor & Russell has been established with offices in the Investment Building and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. It amounts to a public announcement to that effect. As to

(See Pages 8, 11 and 26.)

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post Club Editor.

Thousands of Daughters of the American Revolution filed across the stage of Constitution Hall last night to be greeted by their president general, Mrs. William A. Becker, national officers and State regents of the society at the president general's annual reception. It was the final official function of her administration and rivaled in brilliance the spectacle of the opening night of the Forty-seventh Continental Congress.

Mrs. Becker, wearing her court gown of talisman rose satin, embroidered in pearl sequins and diamente and carrying a great bouquet of roses, led the procession of officers onto the stage, escorted by three of the White House aides, Lieut. J. R. Johnson, and Capt. Sarratt T. Hames, of the Army and Lieut. J. H. Nevins of the Navy. Immediately behind her entered the honorary vice presidents general, the members of her cabinet and regents from all the States in the order of their admission to the Union. Foreign chapters also were represented by regents or vice-regents.

Pages First in Line.

The first to go down the line after it formed were the 300 pages, led by their chairman, Miss Dorothy Jenkins, who were later to be entertained at their annual ball at the Mayflower Hotel.

After them came the great body of other guests, forming a line which circled the corridor of Constitution Hall and kept moving through for nearly two hours. One or two who came using canes or crutches rather than miss the reception, were assisted directly down from a front entrance, so as not to be obliged to stand in line.

McNutt Palace Plan Assailed As an Outrage

The Political Scene.

Palaces Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

The House heard a blistering Republican denunciation yesterday of what were described as Administration plans to build two "palaces"—one of them bigger than the White House—for the high commissioner to the Philippines.

Representative Engel (Republican), of Michigan, declared it was "an outrage and a shame" to spend "the taxpayers' money" for such elaborate structures "when we are running behind billions of dollars and especially since we are going to get out of the Philippines."

Engel said the first "palace," to be built on the shores of Manila Bay, would be 263 feet long and 183 feet wide and contain 86 rooms.

"That's 49 feet longer and wider than the White House," he said.

"It's going to have a ballroom with a dance floor 65 feet long and 40 feet wide and will be two stories high. That'd be a pretty good-sized farmer's barn, if you ask me."

Asserting it would cost about $500,000, Engel was particularly critical of the site for the building which he said was selected by Gov. Murphy of Michigan when he was governor general of the Philippines. The site includes 17 acres of land reclaimed from Manila Bay at a cost of $75,000.

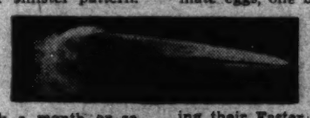
Representative Rabaut (Democrat), of Michigan, told the House Engel was attempting to criticize Murphy.

"Murphy is coming up for reelection this year, so it's time to get out the brickbats, or what have you," Rabaut said.

There'll Be No Hybrid Ibises at the Zoo; Mr. (Public Morals) Stork Breaks the Eggs

There aren't going to be any little ibises frisking around the Zoo with their feather striped in that piquant red and white bar sinister pattern.

The woolly-necked stork—the old Puritan—saw to that yesterday. He adopted the position the ibises are going to be legitimate or not at all.



There was quite a lot of talk a month or so ago, among the herons, about the scandalous way the white ibis was hanging around the flaming scarlet Lady Ibis. "What a terrible thing for her husband, poor Ibis," chattered the Lady Herons.

The toucan took up the story, and so did the ducks. It was the love birds, though, that really dished the dirt around.

But none of them told her husband and when the scarlet Lady Ibis began sitting on three eggs, there was more clattering of busy beaks, but it looked like it was going to be one of those things.

That's where Woolly, the stork, comes in.

He finally acted on Monday, when the eggs were about due to hatch and the Zoo was simply all agog over the precise nature of the stick candy pattern the little birds would have.

Solemn and austere, the stork chased Lady Ibis off her nest. Then he picked up the illegitimate eggs, one by one, and dropped them on the concrete floor.

The strange example of animal behavior occurred Monday, while the birdhouse was closed as children were rolling their Easter eggs on the greensward outside. The ibis couple are inconsolable.

A firm believer in convention, Woolly apparently could not tolerate the idea of a white ibis flouting the eligible maidens of his own kind for a scarlet minx.

Then again, maybe something just cracked inside his little skull and he went berserk. The insanity theory is pretty weak, however, because Woolly was his same old placid self after attending to the ibis eggs.

Keeper Malcolm Davis saw him do it, but did not have time to interfere. He thinks Woolly may not have been protecting the public morals after all. It seems the stork was pretty downcast about a month ago.

So it might be jealousy.

7 More Strikes Flare as Fisher Settles Dispute

U. A. W. Ends Dues Drive; Threatens to Keep Non-payers in Plants.

By the United Press.

Flint, Mich., April 19.—A labor dispute which had paralyzed Fisher Body Plant, No. 1, and the Buick Motor Co. assembly line was settled tonight, but elsewhere on the Michigan labor front a new strike broke out and seven others were in progress.

President Homer Martin, of the United Automobile Workers Union, called off a dues-collection drive which had forced shutdown of the Fisher plant. Because of lack of bodies, the Buick line closed, throwing more than 5,000 men out of work in the two-day dispute.

Fisher Body officials said the plants would reopen Thursday. The 24-hour delay, company officers said, was necessary for "technical adjustments." Buick will reopen tomorrow.

In announcing the end of the dues drive, Martin said:

"The union has decided to give General Motors no further excuse for closing its plants and throwing men out of work."

The Fisher plant was ordered closed on the company contention that the union, barring members who had not paid their dues and nonunion members, prevented 400 men from going to their jobs. Fist fights and disorder broke out as pickets surrounded the plant gates.

Meanwhile, in Detroit 198 workers on the Plymouth production line walked out in protest against treatment of a union shop steward. Five other Detroit factories were closed by strikes affecting 1,700 workers. At Saginaw, closing of the Saginaw furniture shops because of a labor dispute threw 100 out of work.

After receiving instructions from Martin, Henry Wilson, chairman of the Fisher local, said the union might carry on the campaign "with reverse English."

"Since the company has expressed such concern that its stooges report for work we may see that they stay there," he said. "We may do our dues collecting at the gates after working hours."

By the Associated Press.

In New York City, former guards at the Polo Grounds picketing the field as members of an A. F. of L. union, momentarily withdrew to permit Mayor F. H. LaGuardia to enter the park without actually going through a picket line.

At two other strike-hit cities—Rochester, N. Y., and Columbus, Ohio—mediation went forward.

In Rochester, truck drivers striking on wage and hour issues held a second conference with produce dealers.

In Columbus, local transportation facilities continued crippled because of the walkout of street car and motor bus operators seeking higher wages and the closed shop, and a Federal conciliation representative was busy.

At a Ford assembly plant near Long Beach, Calif., operations were curtailed by a strike, whose leaders claimed the company had refused to bargain collectively.

Green Prophesies A.F.L.-C.I.O. Peace In Talk to Britain

William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday carried his fight with John L. Lewis and the National Labor Relations Board to the British Empire in a special radio broadcast.

Assailing Lewis and the NLRB's administration of the national labor relations act, Green nevertheless predicted that the A. F. L. and C. I. O. eventually would patch up their differences. He asserted the Wagner act had given "labor a new birth of freedom."

Expressing approval of President Roosevelt's recovery-relief expenditures, Green said that the program could be made really effective only by adding the "vital element of unity of purpose in all fields of endeavor."

Bridges, an Australian who has not yet received his final citizenship papers, was to face a hearing Monday in San Francisco on charges having to do "with his alleged membership in the Communist Party."

A. C. Smith, Transfer Head, Belongs to 53 Organizations

Fight for Suffrage Now Chief Concern of President of Reciprocity Clubs; He Predicts Victory Soon.

By Christine Sadler

Arthur Clarendon Smith—founder, friend and joiner—has as his motto: "The Best Way to Get Even Is to Forget." It is printed in large letters and scattered among the numerous pictures and certificates which line his office at the Smith Transfer Co. He never wants to get even with the organizations to which he belongs, of course; but just the same, it's a wonder he does not forget some of them. (He belongs to 53.)

When Smith joins the Society of Natives—to which he is eligible—he will be, by his own admission, "a member of everything in town except the Republican Club."

Founded Many Groups.

The records show he has founded: The Central Business Men's Association, the Federation of Business Men's Associations, the Washington Reciprocity Club, Opportunity House, Troop A of the District of Columbia National Guard, Bull Run Camp of Sons of Confederate Veterans. He has helped found: The Democratic League of Washington, D. C., the District of Columbia Suffrage Association, the District of Columbia Trucking Association, the Cleveland Park Congregationalist Church, Fairfax Country Club and Fairfax Hunt Club.

Just now he is most interested in the suffrage group, which he thinks is making considerably headway. The victory will come, he believes, because of the interest of the young people. "The boys and girls of the District are interested in governmental affairs as they have never been before. They are going to demand a more democratic treatment and it will have to be given to them," he declares.

The first member of Smith's family to vote was his daughter, who married a Kansan and voted in that State by mail. "Her vote was an event, I can assure you," he says. "My father lived all his life and never voted; so we had enjoyed no previous suffrage experience."

Smith is president of the Lee Highway Association, national president of the Reciprocity Clubs of America, director of the American Trucking Association, past president of the Washington Lion's Club, was an alternate to the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia, and belongs to at least 30 other groups and societies.

His pet hobby is Opportunity House, which he sees as an important instrument for good. One of the groups he is "proudest of is the Federation of Business Men's Associations, which has grown and prospered and is today the recognized voice of the little business man in Washington.

Moved President Wilson.

When Smith started the transfer company which bears his name, in 1912 he had four horses, two open-top express wagons, and $500 in cash. He has moved many things to many parts of the country since that time, but the moving he is proudest of is that he did when he moved President Wilson from Princeton to Washington. The testimonial he received then he continues to use on his calling cards.

However many societies are meeting, Smith sayes Saturday night "for the family." The family includes Mrs. Smith, the married daughter, and a son who is a student at Washington and Lee University. The Smiths live at 2949 McComb street northwest.

On Friday—Wilbur S. Finch, president of the D. C. Suffrage Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

'McCarran' Aviation Control Bill Approved, But Senator Disowns It.

A bill setting up a civil aeronautics authority for Government control over aviation was approved yesterday by the Senate Commerce Committee, but Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who was listed as the author, promptly disclaimed it. He declared the Committee headed by Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, had "emasculated" labor provisions of his bill.

McCARRAN.

The measure approved provides for a five-member bipartisan commission with six-year terms at $12,000 yearly, with control of rates, licenses and other matters. A special air safety board of five members at $7,500 each annually also would be appointed by the President. McCarran is expected to seek to amend the bill from the floor to regain control of aviation labor relations under the National Mediation Board.

The long-gone "red rider" which forbade D. C. school teachers discussing communism in their school rooms arose yesterday as a political threat against an Alabama member of the House. Labor's Nonpartisan League announced that it would support William C. Taylor in the coming elections against Representative Boykin, of the First Alabama District, charging Boykin had voted to recommit the wage and hour bill, voted "to condemn strikers" and against repeal of the bill "which imposed a gag on District of Columbia school teachers."

* * * *

A petition to force action on his wage-hour bill over hostility of the Rules Committee, was introduced yesterday by Representative Stack (Democrat), Pennsylvania. Should enough signatures (218) be obtained to bring the measure out of the committee, he said he would agree to substitute it for the bill of Chairman Norton of the Labor Committee, or any other bill acceptable to the American Federation of Labor. He pointed out that the Norton bill had not been in committee long enough to permit invoking use of a petition, and that further delay might jeopardize chances of passage of that measure at this session.

High Co-op Pay Ruins Farmers, Wheeler Avers

'No Wonder They Are Broke,' He Tells Inquiry Witness.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, declared yesterday that large salaries of some corporation officials and others were a "direct threat to institutions of our country."

Wheeler's comment came after E. F. Creekmore told the Senate Agriculture Committee he had been paid from $25,000 to $75,000 a year for managing the American Cotton Co-operative for the last seven years.

"No wonder these poor devils of farmers are broke," Wheeler said when investigators for the committee testified the ACCA had paid $6,524,437 to officers in recent years and less than $400,000 in patronage dividends to cotton farmers.

It Was No Sacrifice.

Creekmore said he made $97,000 profit one year as an independent cotton merchant prior to going with the co-operative and added:

"Strange as it may seem, I thought I was making a sacrifice going with the co-operative."

"Unless people like you and some others who have been gouging the farmers are willing to make some sacrifices then there is a question in my mind that our institutions can carry on," Wheeler replied.

"I presume that Mr. Sloan (Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the board) thinks he is making a sacrifice when he takes down the tremendous bonuses from General Motors. They all feel the same way. I tell you that this thing has got to stop."

Many United States Loans.

The committee is investigating operations of the co-operative, which has received millions of dollars in Government loans.

Creekmore presented the salary list of last year to the committee. It showed he received $35,000, that 23 officials drew more than $5,000, and 42 more than $2,400.

Creekmore said that "considering responsibility and eperience," officials of the co-operative "are paid less than those in the private trade."

For comparison, he offered a salary list of Anderson & Clayton Co., large independent cotton firm, which he said did a busines equal to that of the co-operative — about 1,500,000 bales a year. This list ranged higher than the co-operative's, showing ten or more officials paid $20,000 and above.

"That does not mean a thing to me," Wheeler said. "It just means that the farmers are getting gypped that much more. These co-operatives are set up to help the farmer, and officials who get in control wreck them."

Alabamans Proud Of Aiding Midgets To U.S. Citizenship

Of all the D. A. R. chapters which have sponsored newly naturalied American citizens this year, the Montgomery, Ala., daughters are the proudest. Their protegees include a group of five Russian midgets.

"The midgets, two men and three women, belonged to a circus troupe which wintered in Montgomery," Mrs. E. R. Barnes, Alabama State regent, explained yesterday. This spring several of the local daughters went to the naturalization court and at the end of the examination presented the new citizens with American flags, flag codes and D. A. R. good citizenship manuals.

"The naturalization officer said their examinations were the best he had ever seen," Mrs. Barnes went on. "The midgets had prepared for them with the help of another circus performer. They were most appreciative of our encouragement and said they intended to become the very best citizens possible."

'Bank Night' Outlawed.

Hartford, Conn., April 19 (U.P.).—The State Supreme Court of Errors tonight outlawed "bank night."

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, April 19.—The removal of all tax exemption features from Federal securities, as proposed in the Senate version of the tax bill and strongly favored by President Roosevelt, has the overwhelming indorsement of public opinion in a nation-wide survey.

George Gallup.

The President has declared that he will send Congress a message asking for levies on the income of all future Federal issues. A majority of the voting public, according to the survey, would go even further than the President and eliminate tax exemption on State and municipal securities as well.

The survey, which was conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, sheds new light on an aspect of the tax exemption problem which has puzzled observers for many years. It is generally agreed that a constitutional amendment would be required to give the Federal Government power to tax income from securities issued by State and local governments. The prime question has been, would such an amendment stand any chance of being ratified within a reasonable length of time?

Now, for the first time, there is evidence to show that ratification by the people would probably not be difficult to obtain. More than seven out of every ten voters in the Institute's survey favor the principle of removing the tax exemptions.

The question put to a cross-section of voters in all sections of the country by the Institute read as follows:

"Should people who own Federal, State and municipal securities be required to pay taxes on the income from these securities?"

The vote was:

Yes	74%
No	26

The United States Treasury Department has for several years declared in favor of eliminating tax exemption for all future issues of government securities—Federal, State, county and municipal.

The 74 per cent of voters who would presumably favor an amendment to accomplish this end constitute a majority even greater than that which ratified the prohibition repeal amendment four years ago. Approximately 70 per cent favored repeal, and ratification of that amendment took less than a year.

President Roosevelt's plan regarding tax exemptions would apply only to future Federal issues. Some lawyers believe that the removal of tax exemptions from existing bond issues would also require a constitutional amendment. Judging by the vote in the Institute survey, this type of amendment would likewise be approved by the public.

The Institute survey found no substantial difference of opinion between Republicans and Democrats on the tax exemption issue. It likewise revealed that even voters in the upper income level, where investment in securities tends to be highest, are not opposed to eliminating the tax exemption feature from public securities. These voters are less for it, however, than persons in the middle and lower income levels.

Remove Tax Exemptions?

	Yes.	No.
Upper income group	65%	35%
Middle income group	74	26
Lower income group	80	20

Sentiment for making public securities taxable has been highly stable. A year ago in an Institute survey 76 per cent of voters favored the idea, or approximately the same number as today.

Do voters think that the United States will have to continue relief appropriations permanently? Read the Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post.

Spreckles Offers U. S. All 'Worldly Goods' for Taxes

San Francisco, April 19 (AP).—Rudolph Spreckels, of the California sugar family, offered today to turn over "all the worldly goods" he possessed to the Government to satisfy a $848,000 income tax deficiency incurred in 1927-28. The United States Attorney's office said the proposal would be forwarded to Washington to determine value of the assets.

Litigation has been pending since 1935. A list of all Spreckels' holdings compiled by tax accountants included ranch and oil lands, water rights, an interest in the Tanforan Race Track and various depreciated stocks. Spreckels, one of four brothers, once was reputed a multi-millionaire.

SAFE SPEEDY WAY TO FLUSH KIDNEYS OF HARMFUL ACIDS AND POISONS

Keep Bladder Free From Irritation and Stop Getting Up Nights

35 CENTS PROVES IT WHY PAY MORE?

When you flush out the poisonous waste and acids that are clogging the millions of delicate filtering tubes of the kidneys you are going a long way toward helping nature to purify the blood—this means you'll live a longer, happier and healthier life.

You help nature and nature will reward you — give you more energy — more ambition—increase your physical attractiveness— you'll feel younger—more active.

Irritated Bladder Often Causes Nervousness—Sleeplessness

Not only that, but your irritated bladder should start to function more properly and you'll sleep more soundly the whole night thru.

You can stop getting up nights.

But remember this: when you start to flush kidneys of acid and poisons and put healthy activity into them and also soothe irritated bladder get a tried and true kidney diuretic and stimulant such as Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules that work thoroughly and harmlessly — don't depend on harsh, drastic medicines that promise wonders in just a few days—better be safe than sorry.

A Grand Diuretic Druggists Assert

Your druggist knows all about Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules—he has been selling them for years to people who want a good diuretic and stimulant that is safe and inexpensive—that always works.

There's other symptoms of kidney trouble that make life miserable—that keep you feeling irritable and out of sorts.

Backache, for instance, and dizzy spells—nervousness and those terrible leg cramps—often passage is scanty and frequent and smarts and burns.

You Wouldn't Let Your Bowels Be Clogged With Poisonous Waste?

Doesn't it stand to reason that your waste clogged kidneys need a good thorough cleaning the same as your waste clogged bowels?

And when you can clean them safely and without harm and improve your health while so doing, why not ask your druggist for a 35 cent box of Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules and start to get rid of the excess uric acid which poisons the system.

Sciatica—Neuritis—Lumbago

You can't go wrong on this grand medicine for it has been helping people for over 50 years to correct their aches and pains and to help banish excess uric acid conditions—the aggravation of sciatica, neuritis, neuraglia, lumbago and rheumatism.

BE SURE AND GET THE GENUINE—ASK FOR GOLD MEDAL

Some other symptoms that point to clogged kidneys are puffy eyes—darkness under the eyes and moist palms.

But be sure and remember to ask for GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—the original and genuine—right from Haarlem in Holland—every drug store in America sells them. Adv.

G. H. A. 'Smacks Of Racket,' Says House Member

Shafer Demands HOLC Unit Be Included in Inquiry.

The Group Health Association of the HOLC "smacks very much of a common racket," Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, charged yesterday in a statement urging that it be included in the proposed Congressional investigation.

Shafer accused the G. H. A. of an organized campaign of slander and intimidation to stampede the District Medical Society into violating its convictions and compromising the standards the Medical Society has set for the protection of the public.

Meanwhile, the House Rules Committee had made no move to grant a rule for the Scott resolution calling for an investigation of the District Medical Society and the American Medical Association for their campaigns against the G. H. A. and similar organizations over the country.

Termed a Racket.

"For several weeks now," said Shafer, "Group Health Association has been engaged in a ruthless, high pressure campaign of false and slanderous propaganda obviously designed to smear the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

"The tactics of this organization smack very much of a common racket. The officials of it have attempted to besmirch the reputation of a noble humanitarian profession.

"The medical profession gives away millions of dollars worth of its time and talents every year in this city alone to help the needy. Group Health Association gives nothing away. It has attempted to poison the public mind with the untrue belief that the Medical Society has refused to co-operate in a program to give adequate medical care to persons of low income.

"Actual records show that the Medical Society has been willing to co-operate with G. H. A. from the beginning toward such a goal, and attempted to do so.

Says Laws Violated.

"A glance at the record of the G. H. A. reveals a very unsavory picture. It received a gift of $40,000 of the taxpayers' money from the HOLC at the outset. This gift was held illegal by the Comptroller General; it was condemned by the House Appropriations Committee, and the Senate Appropriations Committee wrote definite provisions in the new HOLC allotment of funds forbidding any future gifts of this kind.

"The corporation counsel has ruled that the G. H. A. is violating the insurance laws of the District. The United States district attorney has ruled that it is violating the medical laws of the District.

"At the present time the organization is using Government time and facilities to attack and intimidate the Medical Society because the latter refuses to co-operate and thereby compound these violations of the law.

"An unsparing investigation of G. H. A. in my opinion is essential for the protection of the public."

Kirkpatrick Explains.

William G. Kirkpatrick, president of the Group Health Association, told members of the District Co-operative League last night that the purpose of his organization is to provide medical service for persons in all income groups. That purpose, he said, he had explained to Dr. Thomas I. Neill, president of the District Medical Society, in a reply to a letter in which he quoted Neill as saying that both the G. H. A. and the Medical Society aimed to assist persons of low income.

Kirkpatrick declared that not only are G. H. A. physicians barred from several hospitals but that one hospital has refused to accept G. H. A. members for treatment. He withheld the name of the hospital at first but when pressed by the audience told them that it was Sibley.

Scoffing at charges that his group is laying the foundation for State medicine, the G. H. A. head asserted: "We're not approaching socialized medicine. We're just banding together to hire doctors."

Totem Pole Origin Will Be Discussed

The origin of totem poles, which are not legacies from prehistoric times but an intense growth of heraldry and plastic arts in the past few hundred years, will be discussed by Dr. Marius Barbeau, dominion ethnologist, of Canada, at the 286th meeting of the Washington Academy of Science in the National Museum Auditorium, at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow.

Dr. Barbeau will show motion pictures of totem pole ceremonies along the Nass and Skeena rivers of Alaska, and will sing Indian songs to the accompaniment of an Indian drum.

Sub-Committee Splits 2-2 on D. C. Race Bill

Act Changed to Assure Local Control Hangs in House Group.

The battered District race track bill came through another round with the judiciary sub-committee of the House District Committee yesterday, but was left hanging on a tie vote of 2 to 2.

Under the chairmanship of Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, the sub-committee adopted several amendments to insure control of the track by Washingtonians.

When it came to a vote on approval of the measure the committee was divided, and the fifth member, Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was absent.

Another meeting was called for today to break the tie before the full District Committee meets. Nichols has indicated, however, that he is not interested in the race-track controversy, that he will not vote for or against it.

Consequently, the whole issue may be submitted to the full committee without recommendation. The committee last year reported a similar bill favorably, but recalled it when an intracommittee fight developed.

Members of the sub-committee who voted for the bill are Representative Sacks (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, its author, and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois.

Opposed were Chairman McGehee and Representative Brewster (Republican), of Maine.

The three major amendments adopted by the sub-committee are that:

1. One of the three race track commissioners shall be a woman.

2. All members of the commission must have resided in Washington at least five years prior to their appointments.

3. The racing season will be limited to 36 days, instead of 54 as provided in the original bill.

Dog Muzzle Order Effective May 1, Owners Warned

Your dog, if he is to be outdoors this summer must have a muzzle on and after May 1, by order of the District Commissioners.

Yesterday the city warned dog owners that after that date any poodle, police dog, or what have you, will be impounded if loose without a muzzle.

This does not apply to dogs held in leash by their owners "or other responsible person."

The order expires October 1.

The muzzle must be "a good substantial muzzle, securely put on, so as to prevent it (the dog) from biting or snapping," the rules say.

Coogan Earned 1 1-3 Million, Not 4, Says His Mother

Los Angeles, April 19 (AP).—Mrs. Lillian Coogan Bernstein, mother of Jackie Coogan, filed an affidavit in court late today declaring Jackie earned only $1,300,000 in movies and in vaudeville as a minor, instead of the $4,000,000 he claims; also that he earned between $30,000 and $40,000 in the last two years.

The affidavit was filed in answer to her 23-year-old son's suit against her and her husband, Arthur L. Bernstein, for an accounting of his film earnings.

Jackie said today his lawyers had been searching for a will purportedly signed by his late father, subsequent to the one that was admitted to probate, which did not mention him.

U. S. Aid Asked To Save Shores Eroded by Sea

Beach Preservation Group to Seek Earmarking of Federal Funds.

Ocean beaches are in danger of being washed away—but some projected Federal relief expenditures might help save them, the American Shore and Beach Preservation Association decided at a meeting here yesterday.

J. Spencer Smith, president of the society and head of the New Jersey State Board of Commerce and Navigation, who addressed the morning meeting at the National Research Council Building, asserted that "we must care for beaches and replenish them, like the human body. "He urged united action by coastal communities to overcome the engineering, legal and financial problems involved.

Cape Hatteras National Seashore, established last August as the first national ocean recreation area in the United States, was described in an illustrated talk by H. E. Weatherwax, of the Department of the Interior.

Other speakers were Dr. Albert L. Barrows, of the National Research Council; Thorndike Saille, of New York University; Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, chief of engineers, U. S. Army, and Col. Elliott J. Dent.

Smith was re-elected president of the association; George Hjelte, superintendent of the Los Angeles department of playgrounds and recreation, vice president; Frank D. Holmes, of the New Jersey board of commerce and navigation, secretary-treasurer.

Maine to Send Old Fiddler to Folk Festival

Daughter and Granddaughter Will Accompany Him in Song Program.

New England's contribution to the folk texture of American life will be presented at the fifth National Folk Festival by Eugene H. (Happy Gene) Staples, his daughter and granddaughter. Their appearance will be sponsored by Gov. Barrows, of Maine, and his council.

Staples, whose home is in Dixfield, Maine, is the champion old fiddler of his State. Some of the tunes he will play he learned 70 years ago.

Among them will be "Beaux of Albany," which George Clinton asked to be played at his inauguration for Governor of New York in 1777; "Opera Reel," and "Come, Haste to the Wedding."

Chantey on Program.

Mrs. Winifred Staples Smith, the daughter, will sing "Maid of Mountain Brow," which she learned from Maine lumberjacks when she was a little girl; the Penobscot River Chantey, which originated in Searsport, Maine, and has been sung by New England sailors in almost every port of the world.

"The Road to Zircon," "Portland Fancy," "The Enterprise and Boxer"—which Mr. Staples will play at his second appearance on the program—are all indigenous to Maine and have been known in that State since the Revolution and War of 1812.

Mrs. Smith and daughter, Mrs. Sybil Winifred Waterhouse, will sing "The Sons of Liberty," which originated among sailors of the Maine Coast in the War of 1812, and "Lovely Lou," another Maine song.

The festival will be held at Constitution Hall May 6, 7, and 8 under sponsorship of The Washington Post Folk Festival Association. Tickets are now on sale on the first floor of The Post.

G. O. P. Insists Gov. Earle Quit in Loan Expose

Should Get Out or Be Impeached, Says Head of State Party.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 19 (AP).—G. Edward Green, chairman of the Republican State committee, today said Democratic Gov. George H. Earle should "resign at once."

"If he refuses, he should be impeached," Green said in a statement.

Green's statement was prompted by the request of Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia, Earle's opponent for the Democratic Senatorial nomination at the May 17 priary, for an investigation of the source and nature of the Governor's private income.

Wilson, speaking last night at Williamsport, asked Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, to develop whether Earle received checks totaling $30,000 from Matthew H. McCloskey, Philadelphia contractor, whose firm, Green said, received more than $9,000,000 in building contracts from the general State authority.

Says He Got Loans.

Earle replied he received several loans from McCloskey, coleader of the Philadelphia Democratic organization, in 1935 and in 1936, but said they were made before there was "any possible contemplation" that the contractor would get State work.

Meanwhile, at Chester, Mayor Wilson declared tonight that Earle has been in "political bondage" for three years and "sold his birthright" by opposing candidates who have supported President Roosevelt.

"I dare you to deny," Wilson said at a political rally, "that it was understood after the conference (with Roosevelt) in the White House several weeks ago that William C. Bullitt was to be the compromise candidate of the Democratic State committee for Governor.

Agreement Broken.

"I dare you to deny that when you returned to Philadelphia, after agreeing upon Mr. Bullitt, that Matthew H. McCloskey forced you to break your agreement."

Earle is a candidate with Charles Alvin Jones, of Pittsburgh, for Governor on a ticket indorsed by the Democratic State Committee.

Wilson asked the Governor whether favoritism had been shown in awarding vast State contracts to McCloskey.

Earle replied today to last night's charges: "Categorically and as emphatically as possible, I deny Wilson's malicious innuendo that there has been favoritism . . . in the awarding of contracts."

Wilson said tonight of the Governor's statement:

"I asked you whether the sum you borrowed from Matt McCloskey was $30,000 and it was borrowed in 1936 and 1937. I thought you were in bondage for only two years. I now see . . . that you have been in bondage for three years."

Police Bill Seeks 2 Reinstatements

Reinstatement of two former Washington policemen—Ralph S. Warner and David R. Thompson—was ordered in a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia. The measure would direct the reinstatement of the two men who were dismissed on order of the Police Trial Board several years ago.

A similar measure, authorizing but not directing the reinstatements, is pending before the House District Committee. Hearings were held last session.

Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee introduced a bill, by request, to eliminate the $2,500 limitation on the salary of the secretary of the District Minimum Wage Board, a post now held by Miss Gwyn Geach. The new salary would be fixed in accordance with the classification act.

D. C. Deaths Fall Over 17 Per Cent From Last Year

Deaths in the District in the first 13 weeks of this year decreased more than 17 per cent from the same period last year, according to Health Department statistics released yesterday.

A total of 2,229 deaths from all causes was reported as compared with 2,696 last year. Pneumonia was responsible for 242 deaths, a drop of 146. Contagious diseases reported caused 381 deaths, a decrease of 284.

Whitney's Kin Got $1,082,000 To Aid Brother

Testifies at SEC Hearing of Borrowing From Morgan Partner.

By the Associated Press.

George Whitney told the Securities Commission today of borrowing $1,082,000 from a fellow Morgan partner in an effort to get his brother, Richard, out of his "jam."

Whitney testified Thomas W. Lamont, member of the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., lent him this sum so he could help his brother return securties belonging to the New York Stock Exchange gratuity fund. He said the loan since had been repaid.

The Securities Commission is investigating the failure on March 8 of the firm of Richard Whitney, who was sentenced last week to a prison term for misappropriation of securities, including $750,000 belonging to the gratuity fund.

George Whitney was composed throughout a minute examination by SEC counsel, Gerhard A. Gesell. Only at the end of the hearing was his manner at all shaken. This occurred when Gesell asked if he had "readily available in cash" the $1,082,000 needed to help his brother return the gratuity funds securities.

"Not readily," he replied.

Gesell then asked if he had borrowed the money and from whom.

"I borrowed $1,082,000 from Thomas W. Lamont," he said in a flat voice.

"Did you tell Lamont your brother had unlawfully used the securities of a customer?"

"Yes."

"Did Lamont take the matter up with other partners of J. P. Morgan & Co.?"

"I am sure he didn't."

Receiver Plans Suit to Collect Loan Unit Funds

Peyser Seeks $320,000 Proceeds of Montgomery Share Sales.

Suit against directors and officers of the Montgomery Building & Loan Association to recoup proceeds of the sale of $320,000 in foundation surplus certificates was threatened yesterday by Col. Julius I. Peyser, shortly after his appointment as receiver for the company.

Col. Peyser was appointed by District Court Justice James M. Proctor after a hearing at which dissolution of the company was authorized and the appointment of an officer of the company as receiver was rejected. The major portion of the assets will be sold to the Perpetual Building Association and will enable the stockholders and most of the creditors to receive 100 per cent dividends.

Alleging the sale of the certificates represented a "fraud," Col. Peyser said that commissions of approximately 80 per cent were paid the promotors of the sale of the certificates. He said most of the purchasers were women. William E. Richardson, attorney, was selected to represent Col. Peyser.

The Montgomery association filed a petition several months ago asking for permission to dissolve. Justice Jennings Bailey sent the request to the court auditor for examination and then referred the matter to Justice Proctor yesterday. The institution, which claims to be solvent, has about 2,000 investors in the certificates, and they have about $320,000 invested. It was the fear that none of these was covered by the dissolution program that led to request for a receiver.

Appointment of Col. Peyser was made after consultation with other parties interested in the litigation. As soon as all agreed upon his selection, Justice Proctor made the appointment.

Bubble Dancer Plunges to Death

New York, April 19 (AP).—Thais Giroux, 26, a Broadway fan-and-bubble dancer, jumped from a fifth-floor hotel room today, after telling a friend that she was "sick and tired of it all."

The friend, John Stoppeli, 29, was questioned, but released when the case was determined a suicide.

Stoppeli said the girl spent yesterday looking for a job. Hotel officials said she owed $46.90.

Plane Searches 250-Mi. Coast For Whitfield

Failure to Discover Any Traces Backs Theory Flier Still Lives.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—A police airplane searched today along 250 miles of Long Island shoreline for Andrew Carnegie Whitfield, handsome young nephew of Andrew Carnegie, and the silver and red monoplane in which he vanished last Friday.

The aerial search started from Roosevelt Field, where the missing flier was last seen and where he supposedly took off for Brentwood, N. Y., 20 miles away—an airport he never reached.

Whitfield's bride, in seclusion at the home of her socially prominent parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Halsey, was reported near prostration. John N. Whitfield, brother of the missing man, said there had been no dissension between the couple.

Massachusetts State police said an Ayer policeman had reported seeing in a lunchroom a man who closely resembled newspaper pictures of the missing nephew-namesake of the Carnegie steel fortune's founder.

Employes of the Fairfield State Hospital at Newtown, Conn., said a small plane circled over their grounds in mid-afternoon Friday, but descriptions of the craft were vague.

Oren P. Harwood, head of the Bureau of Air Commerce, ordered inspection of hangars at all airports in the Metropolitan area.

Failure to discover any trace of the plane despite a painstaking search of Long Island and adjacent ocean waters led police to conclude Whitfield was still alive.

Lini Captured In New Drive, Japanese Aver

Fall of City Frees Invaders for Advance on Lunghai Road.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), April 20. Japanese asserted today they had captured the city of Lini, 80 miles northeast of Suchow, in their new offensive to avenge the Taierhchwang defeat.

The Japanese now are in a position to push toward the vital Lunghai Railway, which has been the goal of their Shantung Province campaign for five months.

They also can go to the relief of their garrison at Yihsien, 40 miles to the southwest, where Chinese have been fighting furiously for a month to drive out the exhausted Japanese.

Shortly before these reports were received, Chinese reported a force of 60,000 Japanese, protected by the heaviest artillery barrage of the war, was advancing toward Lini.

[A Japanese spokesman said "one of the fiercest battles of the war was ranging in south Shansi Province," where the Japanese had assumed the offensive following a Chinese invasion of the Japanese conquered areas last week-end, the United Press reported.

[A Chinese spokesman admitted strong Japanese forces were holding the railway station in Hanchwang (which the Chinese claimed to have captured Monday)—Editor's note.]

Japanese trapped at Yihsien still held out stubbornly against Chinese assaults on walls of the town.

While the invaders poured men and munitions into the Lini area from Tsingtao, the Shantung seaport, Chinese also reinforced armies entrenched upon the Yi's west bank.

Japanese planned to prevent the Chinese guerrilla warfare which cut communications and choked the first drive against the Lunghai area, separating Japanese-conquered portions of North China and the Yangtze River Valley.

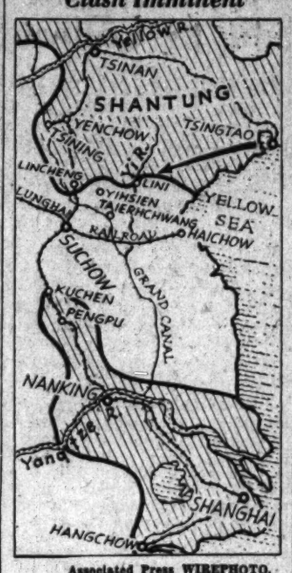
Branch Railroad Vital.

Japanese were forming a second front, facing south, across the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, which leads to Suchow, junction point with the East-West Lunghai. The plan was to make the new offensive wide enough to prevent disruptions by guerrillas. Two divisions of Japanese took up positions west of the Tientsin-Pukow to forestall attacks from that quarter.

Foreign military observers believed the new Japanese drive would be decided on the same branch railroad between Lincheng and Taierchwang, where the first was fought out.

Chinese sources told of the arrival of five fresh Japanese divisions, 26 shiploads of Japanese munitions and several aircraft carriers, which took station off the Shantung coast, presumably for an air attack.

Clash Imminent



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

In a desperate attempt to push over stubborn Chinese resistance in south Shantung Province, Japanese are rushing fresh troops to the Yi River, near Lini (arrow) from Tsingtao. A battle all the way, the Japanese have a bigger one coming at Lini, Chinese say.

4 U. S. Planes Held Smuggled to Spain

Los Angeles, April 19 (U.P.).—An alleged plot to smuggle United States-built airplanes to loyalist Spain with the connivance of the Spanish Ambassador to Mexico was disclosed today in a Federal grand jury indictment, charging violation of the neutrality law, against Fritz Bieler, a Mexican citizen of German extraction, who has fled to Mexico.

United States Attorney Benjamin Harrison said at least four planes purchased in Burbank, Calif., had been smuggled across the border, taken to Vera Cruz, and shipped to the loyalists.

Two Kennedy Children Off Today for London

New York, April 19 (AP).—A second contingent of United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy's family—his daughters, Rosemary, 19, and Eunice, 16—will sail for London tomorrow on the Manhattan, leaving only two of the nine young Kennedys in the United States.

Mrs. Kennedy and Kathleen, 18; Patricia, 13; Bobby, 12; Jean, 9, and Teddy, 6, sailed in March to join the Ambassador.

Joseph, jr., 22, and John, 20, will finish the school year at Harvard, and go to London in June to spend the summer.

Franco Drives At Valencia to Sever 'Artery'

Catches Foe Clinging to Tortosa, Unprepared for Thrust.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, April 19.—Insurgent troops struck south along the Mediterranean coast tonight in a surprise effort to take Valencia and cut Madrid's main artery of supplies.

The new thrust, catching the loyalists unprepared as they mustered all available manpower for a last-stand defense of Tortosa on the Ebro Delta, widened the insurgents' hold on the coast to 40 miles and brought them to within 30 miles of the seaport of Castellon.

Franco Says He's Won.

[The insurgents already have won the civil war, Gen. Franco declared today in a speech broadcast to all Spain, in which he appealed to the government to abandon the struggle, the Associated Press reported.

[The insurgent chieftain said he would be generous to those who had "been deceived"—referring to the populace of government territories—but added his regime would "be inflexible toward those who have criminally used the blood and brave spirit of our youth for the purpose of destroying Spain."

[After his broadcast Franco received a tremendous ovation when he appeared before a Zaragoza throng estimated at more than 100,000.—Editor's note.]

Navarrese troops, under command of Gen. Miguel Aranda, drove down the seaboard from Benicarlo and the inland base of San Mateo and were reported nearing Alcala de Chivert after capturing Santa Magdalena. The column was reported only 65 miles from Valencia.

The insurgents were said to have encountered only sporadic resistance from loyalist "guerrillas."

Fighting Is Hot on Ebro.

Gen. Franco was said to have ordered quick widening of the coastal wedge as far south as the Rio Palancia, 18 miles north of Valencia near the border of Valencia and Castellon maritime provinces. Capture of the river valley, which runs from Teruel to the sea at Sagunto, would open the way for severance of the Madrid "lifeline."

Furious fighting was reported in the suburbs of Tortosa, along the south bank of the Ebro River, as insurgent columns made slow headway against loyalist international brigades holding the city on the northern flank of the seacoast sector.

The important seaplane base at San Carlos de la Rapita fell into Franco's hands as his troops occupied the 7-mile stretch of the river from Tortosa to the sea.

Retreating loyalists dynamited two vehicular bridges across the river at Amposta and the railroad and automobile bridges at Tortosa.

In the far north at the tip of Franco's 127-mile fighting front, along which he has massed 180,000 troops and 300 planes, the insurgents established themselves in the mountains and plugged up five passes, preventing further flight of government troops into France along the frontier as far east as the tiny republic of Andorra.

Trapped by Gen. Juan Solchaga's forces, a loyalist division under Gen. Garcia Gomez crossed the Pyrenees to France.

[One thousand government militiamen laid down their arms, surrendering Viella, capital of the Aran region, without a battle, according to the Associated Press.—Editor's note.]

By encircling Montasia, Mont Caro, Sierra de las Rasas and Sierra de Montengrelo to the south and southwest of Tortosa the insurgent columns were reported to have trapped large numbers of loyalists within a 1,000-square-mile area.

North of the Ebro, Franco's bombing planes bombarded the highway from Tortosa to Tarragona, clogged with retreating troops, convoys and artillery. A fleet of black-tipped bombers from the rebel base at Palma de Majorca in the Balearics bombed the suburbus of Barcelona. Loyalist pursuit planes drove the raiders off.

Mutiny Reported.

Perpignan, France, April 19 (AP). Travelers reaching France from across the Spanish border said today mutiny had broken out among government troops in the Barcelona barracks.

The reports could not be confirmed.

Barcelona, April 19 (AP).—Thirty-nine persons were sentenced to death today by two special courts sitting in high treason cases. Four persons received sentences of 30 years' imprisonment.

Wants 'Grown Up' Dress

PRINCESS ELIZABETH, who will be 12 years old tomorrow and some day may rule the British Empire, pleaded with Queen Elizabeth yesterday for permission to wear a "grown-up girl's" dress on her birthday instead of the customary knee-length frock. But the queen said "No!" and she must wait another year. However, the princess made practically all the arrangements for her party.

Ickes Remains Unsure Helium Is Not for War

Discusses Sale to Nazis With Roosevelt, Wants Penal Bond.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes said yesterday he was not satisfied yet that a pending contract for the sale of helium gas to the German Zeppelin Co. afforded "proper protection" against use of the gas for foreign military purposes.

Ickes discussed the proposed sale to Germany with President Roosevelt, and said, as he left the White House, that the President had not given him any opinion about the contract.

Germans Refuse Bond.

"There are legal and practical questions that have to be resolved before I can express them in a contract," Ickes said.

The State Department, he explained, had approved the proposed sale and had favored "a bond," without naming an amount to be furnished by the Zeppelin company, as a guarantee that the non-inflammable gas sold from America's monopoly supply would be used only for commercial aviation purposes.

Ickes said the Zeppelin firm had notified him it would not furnish a performance or penal bond. The Navy and War departments, he said, as well as the State Department, "concur in the idea of a bond."

Enough for 300 Blimps.

Ickes recalled that Congressional committee testimony on a bill to authorize the export of helium showed 10,000,000 cubic feet of the gas would be required for one large dirigible on a roundtrip across the Atlantic.

The same amount, he said, could be used to inflate about 300 small blimps.

The German Zeppelin interests arranged to purchase a supply of the gas from the United States to inflate a new dirigible to continue trans-Atlantic airship service, interrupted by the explosion that destroyed the Hindenburg over Lakehurst, N. J.

Canadians to Build Planes for Mexico

Mexico City, April 19 (AP).—Representatives of the Canadian Car & Foundry Co. today announced they had signed a contract with the Mexican government for construction of a factory to build war planes here.

The contract provided that Mexico and the Canadian company share equally in the estimated $2,000,000 cost.

accusations against Italy and possibly endanger the negotiations.

Blondel Sees Ciano.

Jules Blondel, French charge d'affaires in Rome, consulted with Foreign Minister Ciano today and it was agreed to begin conversations immediately for a general settlement.

The only decree which might be presented at the cabinet meeting with President Lebrun tomorrow, informed quarters said, was one calling for 10,000,000,000 francs (about $316,750,000) in advances to the government from the Bank of France.

Foreign office officials said negotiations in Rome would be carried out by the charge d'affaires. France has not had an ambassador in Rome for more than two years because she refused to credit an envoy to King Vittoria Emanuele as Emperor of Ethiopia.

The League Council, foreign office officials said, must declare that Britain and France are free to recognize the Ethiopian conquest before an ambassador can be appointed.

Italy, France Draft Pact.

Rome, April 19 (AP).—Diplomatic moves in Rome today foreshadowed a new European setup.

On the heels of the Italo-British friendship accord of Saturday, Italy and France agreed to start negotiations to re-establish their traditional friendship, shattered by the Ethiopian war.

At the same time, responsible diplomatic sources said, Italy was sounding out Yugoslavia on a military alliance to make the Adriatic an Italian-Yugoslav sea.

The two steps were seen as an attempt by Premier Mussolini to make Italy less dependent on his working agreement with Reichsfuehrer Hitler. Officials asserted, however, the Italo-German alliance was as strong as ever and would remain the keystone of Italy's foreign policy.

Five-Power Pact Held Goal.

Diplomatic quarters felt that the goal of Duce's present diplomacy was a five-power pact among Italy, Germany, Britain, France and Poland as an adjunct to the Rome-Berlin agreement—and as a shock absorber if that agreement should break.

The suggested alliance with Yugoslavia would be designed to stop any German move to regain the Adriatic ports once held by Austria. It was doubted that Italy would display much solidarity with Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia's associate along with Rumania in the Little Entente, in view of Mussolini's continuing tieup with Hitler.

Seek Pact Like Britain's.

The French, opening conversations on proposed resumption of an exchange of ambassadors with Italy, sought Italian concessions, particularly regarding Tunisia, French North African protectorate adjoining Italian Libya.

They also sought a friendship accord similar to the Italian-British agreement as the price for recognition of Ethiopia.

France was anxious to keep Italy out of the Balearic Islands, and was interested in withdrawal of Italian troops from Libya. (Italy promised Britain she would evacuate the Balearics when the Spanish war was ended.)

Since late in 1936, France has not had an ambassador in Rome, refusing to send an envoy accredited to the King of Italy as Emperor of Ethiopia.

Japanese Found Memorial Trust With Panay Gifts

Tokyo, April 19 (AP).—Japanese public contributions of $10,700 made after sinking of the United States gunboat Panay last December 12, will be used to establish a "Japan-America trust," Eugene H. Dooman, counselor of the American Embassy, announced today.

Interest from the trust, endowed in the name of the Panay survivors and relatives of those killed will be used for maintenance of graves of American sailors buried in Japan, mostly merchant seamen of square-rigger days, and for keeping up numerous Japanese memorials to Americans who played leading parts in the nation's modern day development.

It was understood wealthy Japanese would double the present principal. The voluntary contributions have no relation to indemnity asked of the Japanese government for the sinking

Wallace Calls Crop Insurance An Experiment

Secretary Places Wheat Plan Before Growers, Farm Leaders.

Omaha, Nebr., April 19 (AP).—Secretary Wallace placed his wheat crop insurance plan before growers and farm group leaders from the Nation's wheat States here today and counseled them to "recognize that this is an experiment."

Declaring such plans "help make democracy work," Wallace explained how the grower can insure his 1939 crop for either one-half or three-quarters of the average yield.

Wallace said "we do not know how the program will pan out, but we do know that the principle of insurance is applied in almost every field, and that if this plan gives farmers adequate protection against crop losses, millions of farmers will be benefited."

He predicted that, if the plan succeeds, the principle will be expanded to cotton, corn and perhaps other crops.

"Agriculture and the Nation both have a big stake in the outcome of the crop insurance undertaking and all of us must recognize that this is an experiment," he told his attentive listeners.

Wallace, speaking before 1,000 persons and over a nation-wide radio hookup, declared "projects like crop insurance, which require both planning and co-operation, help make democracy work. The succession of boom and collapse is what cripples democracy. The swing from farm surplus to shortage of farm products is one of the causes of that succession."

Mulligan Holds Small Seaplane Is Pressing Need

Development of small seaplanes for the use by private fliers was cited last night by Denis Mulligan, new director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, as one of the most important problems now confronting the aviation industry.

Speaking at a dinner of the Intercollegiate Fliers Club, he said hydroplanes would furnish a means of air transportation which could not only be used by private fliers but which would also obviate the necessity for the expensive airports required by land aircraft.

He also announced the Bureau of Air Commerce intends to begin a series of investigations at Kansas City, Mo., in the field of aviation medicine. The experiments, to be conducted concurrently, will attempt to ascertain the cause of pilot fatigue, to create standards of physical fitness both for private and commercial aviators and to determine the effect of "oxygen lack" on flyers.

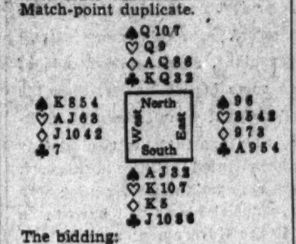
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Good Technique.

One of the best methods of picking up an extra trick is to "steal" said trick before the defenders can be fully aware of their ground. Note the declarer's excellent technique in the following hand, which was played in a match-point duplicate game.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

South had a choice of responses to North's opening diamond bid. Of course, he could have bid one spade but he chose two notrump instead, because of the desirability of having the South hand led up to if the final contract turned out to be notrump. His choice was well taken, especially at match-point duplicate where there must be an effort made in almost every hand to play at notrump instead of a suit.

South's avoidance of a spade bid brought him a good opening lead. West deciding to open a low spade in preference to leading away from his semi-tenace in hearts. The spade ten held the first trick and the club king was laid down. East won and returned a spade. Now came the first bit of deception on declarer's part. Instead of playing low, which would have let the cat out of the bag as to the spade situation, declarer played the jack. West won with the king, and, under the impression that declarer's ace would fall with the queen on the next play, returned another spade. Dummy's queen held and declarer followed with the three-spot. A low club was led to dummy's queen. West can hardly be blamed for holding off, as he could not know what was coming. The heart queen won, and two club tricks were cashed, ending in declarer's hand. Now the spade ace was laid down. At this point declarer still had the king-10 of hearts and the king-5 of diamonds. Dummy had its original four diamonds. West found that he could not discard safely; if he let go the heart ace, declarer's king would be promoted to a full trick, whereas to let go a diamond was to unguard the suit. Knowing that declarer had the heart king and being uncertain about the diamond king, West properly discarded a low diamond, but to no avail. Declarer cashed the diamond king, then led his remaining diamond to dummy, and took the rest of the tricks. By shutting out the heart ace declarer took top on this board.

Recovery Loans.

The recently enacted measure widening the lending powers of the RFC appears to have been passed under rather serious misapprehension. It was generally supposed that passage of the bill would avert further experimentation with less well regulated types of spending. But those expectations have been disappointed, and Senator Glass is now publicly proclaiming that he believed his bill would "take care of public works." Otherwise, he says, he "would never have introduced it."

Certainly there was good reason to assume that the RFC, with an unused borrowing authority of $1,400,000,000 and with full discretionary power to help finance "projects authorized under Federal, State, or municipal law," would be able to do all that might seem necessary in the public works field. Furthermore, the conservative management of the RFC offered assurance against reckless dissipation of funds in any form of emergency Federal financing. The passage by Congress of the Glass bill, therefore, provides additional arguments against the President's plan to revive the moribund PWA and permit it to lend, or to lend and grant, up to $1,000,000,000 of public money to States and local governments for public works construction.

In a radio address delivered Monday evening Chairman Jesse Jones made reference to the restoration of RFC authority to assist public bodies in the construction of useful public works. Significantly he explained that this is an authority "which we had prior to the establishment of PWA and under which we have loaned $300,000,000 in addition to buying $600,000,000 of such loans from the PWA." This statement certainly supports Senator Glass' view that with the RFC in the field again the re-entry of the PWA is without justification.

In further outlining his plans for extending loans to business, under the liberalized provisions of the law, Mr. Jones repeated past assurances that the RFC does not intend to compete with banks, but to satisfy only those demands for credit which the banks for any reason cannot meet.

The head of the RFC is fully aware of the abundance of present credit facilities available to industries prepared to borrow on terms that meet the standards of careful banking managements. It is evident that he appreciates the sound and valid objections of commercial banks, whose liabilities are repayable on demand, to employing their resources in long-term loans to be used for capital purposes. The RFC proposes to assist banks to carry such slow loans. Or, in case the loan is not of suitable character but otherwise legitimate and reasonably well secured, the bank is asked to put the applicant in touch with the Federal lending agency.

Of particular interest is the announcement that the RFC will consider lending to private bankers and underwriters to aid in the distribution of small security issues "where they appear to be sound and will increase employment." This, as well as the plan for enabling manufacturers to carry inventories against acceptable security, will supply a limited amount of needed funds to business.

But again, the Administration is putting the cart before the horse. It is trying to provide relief for business instead of correcting the conditions that create the capital shortage from which business suffers. Long-term capital funds ought not to be supplied by banks. They should come from reinvestment of savings, and from new capital issues really representative of recovery.

Science And Art.

Yesterday's efficiency experts who inveighed against people in the habit of sitting around and talking may now consider themselves chastised; and those who sat around and talked may rise and bow acknowledgments.

Today always has time to spank yesterday and to say a kind word for the day before yesterday. This great truth is set forth in gentle motherly fashion rather than in coarse masculine terms because its latest illustrator is a lady.

Dr. Esther L. Richards, associate professor of psychiatry at Johns Hopkins University, has been telling visiting nurses that they should take time to talk to their patients and, better than that, listen to them.

And she has praise for the old-time general practitioner, who perhaps had less science than his modern successor but assuredly had more art. He took time to feel the patient's pulse, to look at his tongue, and to sit down and chat about this and that. And beyond question the chatting was not the least important of therapy.

On The Other Horn.

Every new wages-and-hours bill attracts a different group of supporters. It is interesting to see Republicans of the House lining up behind the Norton bill drafted to meet the President's persistent requests for legislation on this subject. Yet that support is entirely natural. Northern Republicans are merely reflecting the interests of their constituents in trying to eliminate wage differentials between the North and South.

As the bill now stands, the division over it is likely to be primarily sectional. Most Democrats from the Northern States will be in the happy position of supporting the appeal of President Roosevelt and organized labor groups for a floor under wages and a ceiling over working hours. At the same time, they can justify their approval of the measure as a means of stopping the migration of northern plants to southern States, where labor is cheap. For them the bill becomes a political windfall.

Advantages for northern Republicans in supporting the bill are scarcely less substantial. It is true that they are helping the President, which few G. O. P. representatives are likely to relish on the eve of the 1938 Congressional campaigns. But, on the other hand, they may use this bill as a bid for labor support in their own States and as a means of satisfying employers concerned over competition with low-wage industries in the South. Even more important from the political viewpoint may be the split which such a bill is certain to bring in the Democratic ranks.

Only southern Democrats who see in the measure a gross discrimination against industries in their home districts will be thoroughly unhappy over the present turn of events. Political considerations will impel them to fight any wages-and-hours bill applying equal standards to the North and South. In doing so, however, they appear to be aligning themselves against the President while Republicans are supporting a major plank in his reform platform.

In these circumstances the White House itself may be inclined to lay this heretofore favored measure aside. For it threatens to cause a more serious split in the Democratic Party than any previous New Deal objective. To press such a measure just prior to the 1938 campaigns might prove a political blunder.

Of course, a bill of this sort ought not to be considered from either a partisan or sectional viewpoint. It involves economic problems of great importance to the entire country. The difficulty is that the North and South regard it from totally different points of view, and no compromise has been devised that would satisfy both. Indeed, there is a grave question as to whether any such middle course is practical.

To freeze wage differentials between the two sections by law would certainly be unsatisfactory. It would tend to perpetuate a disequilibrium that is already a source of friction and instability in industry. In addition, the administrative task of working out and maintaining such differentials on an equitable basis appears to be hopelessly complicated.

On the other hand, the imposition of a single Nation-wide standard would unquestionably work hardship on southern industries. Since the cost of living is lower in the South, partly because of climatic conditions, it may be reasonably argued that minimum wages should be lower there. To this fact may be added the assumption that labor is often less efficient in the South.

In spite of its more realistic consideration of minimum wage and maximum hour legislation, therefore, Congress still finds itself on one or the other horn of the dilemma. The bill meets grave objections with differentials or without them. In the end Congress may reasonably conclude that this is not a proper subject for national legislation—that it can better be left to the State legislatures and labor unions. And it is fortunately not impossible that political considerations may impel the Administration to accept this conclusion.

Defective Brakes.

The accident on Pennsylvania avenue yesterday, which cost the life of a visitor to Washington and jeopardized a bus load of school children, was precisely the type that can most easily be avoided. Had the new automobile inspection law for the District been in effect, it is probable that this accident would never have happened.

Indications are that the victim was run down when the brakes on a 10-ton concrete-mixing truck failed. Officers are said to have found the brakes defective. That is not surprising. For years the drivers of both passenger cars and trucks have obtained licenses for their vehicles without any inspection to determine whether mechanical defects make their operation unsafe. Only cars brought in from other States have been inspected.

Fortunately that period of gross negligence is now nearing an end. An act approved two months ago provides for annual inspection of every motor vehicle in the District. Application of this law awaits only the appropriation of funds to set up two testing stations and provide them with personnel and equipment. Yesterday's accident emphasizes the urgency of supplying such funds in the next deficiency appropriations bill.

Thorough inspection of motor cars will not be a panacea for traffic tragedies. But it should go a long way toward preventing inexcusable casualties chargeable to defective brakes. And the psychological effect of rigid inspections is a definite part of their utility.

A Multiple-Use Auditorium.

No single project undertaken in the District during recent years holds more interest for Washingtonians, and the thousands of visitors who come here annually, than the proposed "national multiple-use auditorium." It is strange that the Capital City has so long been denied facilities of this sort. Soon or late a mammoth auditorium for both official and nonofficial uses will have to be provided. If the Government actually embarks upon the proposed spending program, there will be no time so fitting as the present to secure this development.

The Capital Auditorium Commission appears to have done a careful and thorough job of planning the structure. Its choice of the unused square at Third street and Constitution avenue, originally purchased as part of the Municipal Center site, is entirely logical. Use of that property would permit the District to make a valuable contribution to the project without requiring a local cash outlay difficult to secure. The site is centrally located and close to Union Station, making it convenient for conventions. Parking facilities will have to be provided in the vicinity, but that would be true of almost any site that might be selected.

It is especially pleasing to note the commission's recommendation that the proposed auditorium be made available for symphony concerts, grand opera, ice carnivals and similar events for enrichment of the cultural and recreational life of the community. The building could thus be made to serve three major purposes—as a central hall for national gatherings, as a sort of community center and as a meeting place for the numerous commercial conventions that are held in Washington annually.

The Government could not afford to erect a $9,000,000 building for use only on state occasions. By making it available to commercial and recreational events, however, a commodious hall may be provided with a minimum of ultimate cost. In many respects the commission's plan is a happy one. It should command early consideration by Congress, the more so if the plans permit drill and armory facilities for the local National Guard units.

Close To Banditry.

A local unit of the United Automobile Workers in Flint, Michigan, has devised a method of collecting dues from delinquent members which is as intolerable as it is unique. The procedure is to have organized pickets refuse entry to the plant for all who cannot show receipts for current union dues. As a result over 5,000 other workers have been thrown out of employment in a community where already about one-third of the population is on relief.

This completely lawless episode provides another illustration of the one-sided way in which the Wagner Labor Relations Act functions. As the law stands, the NLRB has no obligation to see that the union formed to represent the workers shall observe rules of fair play in its dealings either with employers or with non-union labor.

In this case, a particularly outrageous kind of coercion has been applied to union members, to non-members, to the employing company, and to the community as a whole. Indeed the latter is the chief victim of an effort to collect funds for the union by methods which have more than a trace of organized banditry.

Whether Broiled Or Boiled.

Those epicures who "could live forever on lobster" have missed the boat—literally. A little item in the day's news reports that she is just putting out from the French port of St. Malo. Besides the crew, it carries 10 persons who are planning to settle two islands in the Indian Ocean known as St. Paul and Amsterdam. These two specks are noted as breeding places for lobsters, and it is the adventurers' plan to pack the delicious crustacea for marketing.

But hold on, lobster-lovers! It is noted that, although St. Paul and Amsterdam are today deserted, they have not always been so. Attempts have been made before to populate them but to no avail. Earlier homesteaders, the despatch relates, died. They starved to death.

"Only 2 per cent of the people in the United States are morons," declares a sociologist, who must have misplaced a decimal or lost a cipher. Two per cent of the people couldn't be in so many places at the same time.

"It is just about impossible to get the modern child to believe fairy tales," declares an educator. When last seen, however, the voter was swallowing them whole by the dozen.

Only One Issue?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of April 18 a gentleman from Gaithersburg takes exception to the statements of those who would imply that "all citizens who sent telegrams against the reorganization bill were backed by Wall Street or Liberty Leaguers."

I am not one of those to whom your correspondent refers, but I do feel that the misguided pressure brought to bear on Congress as a result of organized propaganda by the political opposition to the Administration is a disgrace to democratic procedure in government. With the single issue of executive department efficiency, which the organization bill presented, cunningly beclouded by master conjurers from among the interests which would discredit the New Deal, an election-jittery House doffed its toga of statesmanship and capitulated to expediency. And here is a sample of the logic which lay behind the uprising of a part of our esteemed citizenry:

"The reason we opposed the bill is because if the bill was passed all persons bowing down on their knees to the New Dealers would receive jobs, and those opposed would lose their jobs without regard to efficiency or saving to taxpayers."

Sometimes one marvels at the fascinating intricacies of democracy in action. TUT TUTT.

Bethesda, Md., April 18.

For An Armory.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is hoped that with funds to be expended to relieve unemployment the Administration will not again overlook the deplorable armory situation in the District of Columbia.

The National Guard, the Naval Reserve and the Marine Corps Reserve are housed in condemned buildings, soon to be razed.

I have a son in the Marine Corps Reserve. He is so proud of it, pointing out that his uniform is a badge of patriotism just like the stars and stripes in our country's flag. He is preparing himself seriously for the defense of his country.

His love of country is a beautiful thing but to me it is astonishing that our Government requires him and other fine young men like him to drill in a broken-down firetrap that leaks like a sieve.

GENEVIEVE R. LESTER.
Washington, April 17.

Pump-Priming And Defense.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Stripped of all their verbiage, the President's message to Congress on recovery and his fireside chat seemed to sum up to mean one thing. He is determined to win the next election if possible, thus retaining control for 1940.

Granting that additional expenditures have become necessary as a result of the present depression—which is in turn wholly attributable to the President — the question arises as to the need for expending $1,462,000,000 for public works. The so-called "loans" to States and their subdivisions have been a major scandal. You will notice that the President says, "I believe that by the expenditure of $450,000,000 and the granting of authority to loan up to $1,000,000,000 to States and their subdivisions, a vast number of well-thought-out, needed and permanent public improvements can be undertaken this summer and autumn."

I understand that the Vinson-Trammell naval expansion bill, previously passed by the House and approved by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, will come before the Senate for debate this week and that it calls for the ultimate expenditure of approximately $1,250,000,000. If this bill is approved, some money will have to be appropriated out of the Treasury at once.

As I understand Admiral Leahy's testimony, which the Secretary of State has recently accepted as a true statement of the facts, the expenditure of this billion and a quarter will merely make the Navy strong enough adequately to defend the United States. It is now proposed, however, that the expenditure be spread over from five to ten years. Construction is to proceed at the usual leisurely peace-time pace. Great Britain and other European powers are and have been re-arming feverishly in the last few years, straining every nerve to complete their programs. We have not even begun to re-arm.

Why not substitute an immediate naval appropriation of $1,250,000,000 for the proposed expenditure of $1,450,000,000 for "boon-doggling." Then we will know our money is going where it will do the most good to the country. If Admiral Leahy's testimony is correct, our country is now, or will be in a very short time, at the mercy of any great power which chooses to take advantage of our temporary weakness. Assuming that no nation would make a direct attack on us, there remains the possibility of interference in South America or elsewhere which we could do nothing to prevent.

It is estimated by John Lewis that there are now between 15 and 17 million unemployed in the country. The manufacturers of steel and all other concerns whose products would be used for shipbuilding and munition manufacturing are in dire financial need. The railroads are bankrupt. Why should we not commence the construction of new shipbuilding plants, drydocks, etc., and start building ships and planes, proceeding with the work as was done during the war, by using three or more shifts for 24 hours a day, so that we may remain exposed to attack for as short a time as possible?

It is also claimed that Gen. Craig stated recently that the Army is woefully deficient in coast defenses, aeroplanes, mines, gas masks, bombs, small arms and ammunition, all of which we would need immediately should we be forced into a war. His alleged estimate of the cost of just putting ourselves into a defensible condition is $1,000,000,000.

The naval expansion fund must be provided some time. Why not now? Additional expenditures for coast defense and other Army needs must be made. Why not now? As against this crying need, the President is proposing to throw away one and a half billion dollars for building unneeded postoffices, dog pounds, etc. Immediate appropriations for the naval expansion and for adequately equipping the Army would certainly employ just as many persons, if not more, than the present program. It would boom steel, copper, etc., and increase railroad traffic at once.

Most well-informed persons who have visited Europe recently, including Mr. Hoover, believe that a general European war will be postponed for at least a year, but few feel willing to predict a longer peace. This makes it all the more necessary that we should complete our re-armament before a war breaks out.

Are we not acting as if we knew nothing of what is happening in the rest of the world? Perhaps I am wrong, but to me the immediate initiation of such a program seems to be just ordinary common sense. Why should not a coalition of Republicans and Democrats put forward such a program in opposition to the President's? I believe the public would support it, regardless of party politics.

Once the naval expansion program is completed and we have a Navy strong enough to defend us against any enemies, and adequate equipment for a large Army, together with plans for rapidly mobilizing and training such an Army, it might be possible, no matter what happens elsewhere, for us to avoid a war altogether for at least a generation. And if it could not be avoided, we could at least shorten its duration.

W. CAMPBELL ARMSTRONG,
Washington, April 18.

Southern Apostasy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer was born, raised and educated in the South, as were all his forebears since 1695. He is, therefore, in the position of Marse Henry Watterson, who said, when upbraided for criticizing Cleveland:

Things have come to a hell of a pass
When a man can't wallop his own jackass.

With this as a precedent the writer begs leave to indulge in some criticism of the South. All my life I had indulged the fond belief that the South would remain always the conservative section of our country, and would be its salvation in any crisis that might arise threatening our security and institutions. But with the advent of the New Deal "all they, like sheep, have gone astray," and repudiated and abandoned every political, social and economic principle for which the Southern people have stood and fought throughout their history.

The adulation of our people for Roosevelt is inexplicable upon any ground except the moral decay in the character of our people. Their support of the New Deal is utterly unintelligible upon the basis of their past history. Roosevelt and his associates are fast destroying the rights of the States, which are essential to the preservation of our liberties, and our form of government, heretofore so dear to the hearts of the Southerners, and for which they fought a destructive war for four years.

They are also destroying the social and economic well-being of the South, as witnessed by the reduced export market for cotton, which is the South's chief money crop. The relief policies have destroyed the morale and character of our people, and produced a chaotic condition in the social life of the South, and made it almost impossible to get labor on the farms because nearly all the Negroes are on relief.

As a matter of fact, the people of the South have been so demoralized by the New Deal that they have, through their Representatives in Congress, bartered their character, their souls, their sacred principles and their future welfare, and that of our country, for a mess of pottage in the form of handouts from the Federal Treasury.

The writer believes that with a few honorable exceptions, the South is more poorly and weakly represented in Congress than any other section of the Nation. Our representatives appear utterly ignorant of finance and economics, and of the fundamental principles and historical background of our institutions, and appear willing to sacrifice the welfare of the country at large for their personal political fortunes.

SOUTHERNER.

Mileage For Secretaries.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest your editorial hoping for equalization of the mileage pay system for members of Congress. I would be pleased to see you take a similar interest in a fair mileage for secretaries to members of Congress who are now forced to pay their own expenses to Washington and then back to the district of the Congressman they serve.

Congressional secretaries are the only Government employes who travel in connection with their job who do not receive a mileage allowance. Certain members of Congress have said, "Oh, the people back home would kick if we allowed your mileage."

What would the people back home say if they knew members of Congress appropriated funds for their own mileage and forced secretaries to pay their transportation and that of their families to and from the district? Secretaries are not asking a pork-barrel—all they want is a fair allowance to compensate their expenses back and forth from the district to Washington.

It costs money to travel, but it appears Congress votes money for rail and plane fare for other Government employes and expects its own hired help to thumb their way home or go hungry the month the railway fare home must come out of the check. Help the secretaries get a fair deal. A SECRETARY.

The Post Impressionist

Saved By Sunshine.

IT was during my sophomore year in college that a letter came to me from home one day that turned daylight into darkness. A dearly loved kid brother had been stricken with tuberculosis and the doctors were calling him the boy without a chance.

I was the eldest of the five children in this home, and when I left home to work my way through college he was still in grammar school. Now this young, happy-hearted boy, who had never before known real illness, was struggling with the Great White Plague. "Quick consumption," the doctors called it, and we were told that at best he could probably not live longer than a few weeks.

It is difficult for those who have never personally experienced great calamity of grief to realize that the sorrow which is everywhere in the world can come to them. At first this sense of unreality paralyzed me; then came the sense of crushing sorrow.

But suddenly there awoke in me a sense of outrage. I would not accept such a sentence for this young, eager life. My own physician, to whom I carried my trouble, offered little encouragement, but he did respond to my insistent appeals with definite directions as to the essential things to be done for even the prolonging of life under such conditions. Grasping eagerly at this slight hope, I went to work to carry out his prescriptions.

The first and most necessary step was to get the boy into a more bracing atmosphere, where he could live out of doors and breathe fresh air and sunshine. It was a question whether such a change would be possible in his weakened condition, but finally the family were persuaded to risk the trip to the Northern State where I was then living. I realized that this might only hasten the longer journey for which our patient seemed doomed, but it offered as well the only hope of delaying it.

My next step was to prepare for his coming. On the outskirts of the university town I found a high, sunny spot which made an ideal place for a tent. Friends generously helped me to equip this little impromptu sanitarium with what would be needed for the care of the invalid in the battle we meant to wage with the grim reaper.

Three days later the sad little party arrived. Words cannot describe the pathos of it. The poor lad, emaciated beyond belief, insisted upon helping himself and would not be carried from the train, but when he had tottered through the car his strength failed and he dropped upon the steps. There seemed to be nothing but skin and bones to the frail body that was carried into the tent and placed upon the bed that was waiting for it.

Then began a day-by-day, hour-by-hour fight for the life that seemed slipping away steadily. There was little that medical remedies could do. The patient was kept outdoors virtually day and night, where the warm sunshine could do its healing work. A skilled masseur, who was also of a cheerful disposition and a good story-teller, gave him daily treatments to keep his circulation good and, incidentally, to keep his mind from his illness. A diet carefully planned and temptingly prepared was regularly provided and gently insisted upon.

After several weeks in which little seemed to be accomplished beyond keeping the patient comfortable we were compelled to admit that the emaciation, the failing appetite and the exhausting cough were continuing, and there were moments when it seemed we must face the inevitable. The lad's own attitude varied from the hopefulness so characteristic of the disease to indifference and depression, and when the latter was true it was difficult to resist its influence.

But gradually and with only slight evidences at first, a change for the better began and interest and hopefulness returned. At last there came a day when he was able to sit propped up on his cot outside the tent and enjoy the wide view before him and a few friendly visits. The emaciated limbs slowly regained their steadiness, the thin cheeks their roundness and color, and the listless eyes their alert eagerness. By the time the woods were bright with autumn coloring our patient was able to take long walks every day and came home with a good appetite.

But jubilant though we were over this partial victory, we still knew that a Northern winter, in a climate none too dry, would be a questionable risk for lungs handicapped by the scars of so severe a struggle. And so, with new hope and courage, we saw him started on the long journey to the Arizona desert, where the clear, dry atmosphere would complete the work of healing.

Six years were spent in homesteading and ranching in the Far West, without one return of the illness which might be called a relapse. His strength and vigor have steadily increased with advancing manhood. Five years ago he returned to his old environment and has found no difficulty in maintaining perfect health. Recently he had the great satisfaction of being accepted for life insurance.

My part in his restoration has, beyond question, been my greatest accomplishment, although I do not yet hold a college degree.

Sir Thomaso's Decoration.

PROSTITUTES AND professional gamblers of the underworld of Kansas City should rejoice at the news that Thomas J. Pendergast has been honored by Premier Mussolini with the Order of Knight of the Crown of Italy. Mr. Pendergast is a good man and especially good to the ancient professions which thrive with a minimum of molestation under the benign regulation of his police. He now becomes Sir Thomaso Pendergast, and the honor, such as it is, is singularly fitting, coming from one dictator to another.

PEGLER

Commendatore Pendergast received the ribbon and the insignia of the order from the hands of Allessandro Savorgnan, the Italian vice consul in St. Louis, who said: "The Italians know their friends and know how to show their gratitude." The word "vice" in Signor Savorgnan's title is merely a homonym, for it really means "assistant," but the ladies of the evening who sit smiling in the public show windows of the sin stores and the dealers behind the green tables of the gambling plants will be happily unaware of that. They are likely to sense an additional compliment, conceived with flattering Old World diplomatic subtlety, to the man by whose word Kansas City has remained a wide-open town.

• • • •

AS TO whether the Italians know their friends and how to show their gratitude, Signor Savorgnan probably knows best. It must be noted, however, that as a nation Italy sometimes appears to dissemble her gratitude. She was a friend of Germany in 1916, but showed her devotion by jumping Germany from behind. Again, in 1917, she was a friend of Great Britain. As in the case of Sir Thomaso Pendergast, Italy, on that occasion, presented to various British soldiers and statesmen small tokens of her friendship dangling from pretty ribbons. But less than two years ago, by Mussolini's order, the Italian children were being taught to hate everything British in ten easy lessons.

Moreover, although Mussolini has proclaimed something akin to anschluss with the Nazis of today, it is not long since he suppressed the yodel as a subversive expression among his own captive Nazis in the Austrian Tyrol and was shooting numbers of them for attempting to achieve individual anschluss on foot over the mountain barrier. And the 250,000 surviving Tyrolean Nazis are still captives, forbidden to speak their own language or to yearn for anschluss out loud in any tongue, which is still another way that Mussolini has of showing his friendship, considering how wholeheartedly he claims to cherish the Nazis. So Sir Thomaso Pendergast may be permitted a few mental reservations in his remarks of gratitude on accepting the knighthood of the Order of the Crown of Italy.

• • • •

JUST WHAT services he rendered to deserve this gesture it is hard to perceive from this distance. His local underworld is largely of native American prairie stock, and the only really effective Italian racketeer in Kansas City had the misfortune to be shot dead a few years ago. However, he is mourned openly by Sir Thomaso's police as an extremely high-class racketeer and his killing deplored as a nonunion or anti-administrative job.

Signor Savorgnan did not say explicitly what Commendatore Pendergast did to deserve this gratitude, and it may be that Mussolini just wanted to indicate his general satisfaction over the adaptation of his ideas of government in one American community.

Naturally, the members of the Kansas City underworld will construe the honor as an indirect compliment to them, and it would be a touching demonstration to the boss if they should all take to wearing small duplicates of the medal in token of their loyalty to the Missouri Commendatore.

Mussolini would be nothing without his subjects, and Sir Thomaso never could have earned the Duce's admiration without the support of his people, including the ladies in the display windows of the sin stores and the stick men at the crap tables.

Some regimental commanders, on receiving great personal honors, donate them to regimental headquarters as belonging to the humblest as well as the mightiest. It would be a touching act of humility if Sir Thomaso should turn over his Order of the Crown of Italy to be hung in some parlor house reeking of perfume or some gambling cellar within the protectorate of his machine.

The Once Over

"Bicycles Repaired."

(Lines written on the restoration of the old bicycle workshop of Orville and Wilbur Wright in which they built their first plane.)

Within this narrow room a dream came true . . .
Between these walls two men a vision saw
And paved the way to make a world anew.

Here did two men, who saw through distant years,
Perceive an age few others could behold . . .
They saw the earthbound mastering the skies
And sensed the doom of customs ages old.

Here destinies were shaped, a world remade,
Traditions ended, boundaries effaced . . .
It seems so strange to look upon it now,
This shack where such great hopes were first encased!

Here in these shadows, empty now and still,
Were born the great airliners of today—
Here were the hughest clipper ships conceived
In bright brave dreams when horizons were gray.

"Them Wright boys! . . . Up to some strange tricks again . . .
A funny pair"—That's what the neighbors said—
"They're working on some ship they say will fly . . .
A little touched, I reckon, in the head!"

And, with a man aboard, to rise, to fly! . . .
To travel through the air, far off the ground! . . .
To scale the trees, the roofs, the hillsides high!

The people laughed and said, "They must be mad—
They always were a queer peculiar pair;
Imagine anybody fool enough
To think a man can travel through the air!" . . .

And worked o'er strange contraptions through the night
Believing, never doubting, that in time

And chuckled softly at the work within;
The "horseless carriage" fellow stopped to look
And chug-chugged down the road behind a grin.

Then came that day of days at Kitty Hawk . . .
The funny crate the Wrights had made took off
And carried man with swiftness through the skies
To frenzied cheers of those who came to scoff.

The coast to coast air transports of our time—
The transatlantic lanes that leap the sea—
The mail planes, racers and the bombers huge
On that bleak coast found their nativity.

The countless flying fields that dot the world—
The terminals that roar by night and morn
Were preordained within this little shop,
Here was today's great superliner born.

So now as motors drone in all the skies
And nighttime finds the air lanes all agleam
Pause, stranger, here beside this modest shack,

Concert Of Europe

Anglo-Italian Pact Marks End Of Collective Action But May None The Less Mean Stabilization Of Peace.

By Felix Morley.

THERE WAS AN IRONY symbolic of the times in the choice of the Earl of Perth as the chosen instrumentality of the British government for the signature, on Easter Eve, of the various documents and declarations which compose the Anglo-Italian Pact. For the Earl of Perth, before he assumed the purple, was Sir Eric Drummond, for nearly 14 years the first secretary-general of the League of Nations, the covenant of which is dynamited by this new treaty.

Imagination refuses to halt at the cabled descriptions of the dramatic scene at the Palazzo Chigi, where, under the glare of arc lights and amid batteries of movie cameras, the Italian Foreign Minister and the British Ambassador set their signatures to this far-reaching accord. Instinctively one wonders what the Earl of Perth, who was Sir Eric Drummond, was thinking as he signed his name. Probably it could be summarized in those two pathetic words with which many a lesser man has faced a situation beyond his choosing and beyond his power to rectify. "Oh, well——," the former Sir Eric must have said.

• • • •

BY THIS AGREEMENT with Italy the British government does something more than announce its intention to work for recognition of the Italian conquest of Ethiopia—still theoretically a member of the League of Nations—when the council of that body assembles at Geneva. Thereby is brought to termination the historic resolution of March 11, 1932, approved by 43 nations in addition to Great Britain, declaring that:

. . . it is incumbent upon the members of the League of Nations not to recognize any situation, treaty or agreement which may be brought about by means contrary to the Covenant of the League of Nations or to the Pact of Paris.

By this new accord, moreover, the British government in effect shelves the question of evacuating the Italian troops in Spain until after Gen. Franco's anticipated victory in that country. And it thereby officially favors a Fascist movement, little likely to show any sympathy with League ideas, at the expense of the legitimate Spanish government which, throughout its brief duration of power, was punctilious in its fulfillment of obligations undertaken at Geneva.

It was a notable job to which the former Sir Eric Drummond put the finishing touches on Easter Eve. It was a strange consummation for the man who at one time resented the Fascist badges worn by Italian members of the Secretariat which he labored valiantly to transform into a truly international civil service. And it was as tragic—this coup de grace for that which he had labored to build up—as is the final scene in the epic story "Of Mice and Men," where George fires a bullet into the back of the muddled brain of poor bungling Lennie, who, like the League, could never learn to orientate his enormous strength.

SO THE GREAT IDEA of collective action against a demonstrated treaty violator comes to an end and with it is resurrected, by poignant circumstances at Easter-tide, the old play of power politics which time and again has been responsible for wars, and which the League of Nations was established to replace. Yet it must be recognized and admitted that what has happened was all but inevitable.

The probability of the present Anglo-Italian Pact became apparent as Hitler seized Austria and German troops were rushed speedily to the Brenner Pass. This was not merely another step in the long sequence of aggressions inaugurated when Japan overran Manchuria. It was also a serving of notice that the German will is now dominant in Central Europe; that while Mussolini is still useful to Hitler as an ally he is no longer indispensable, and that continuation of the dangenerous Anglo-Italian feud, smouldering ever since Britain so strongly opposed the Ethiopian conquest, could only serve to make Italy a German tool.

On Premier Neville Chamberlain fell the responsibility of decision. The path of collective action, of an attempt to line the democracies against the dictatorships, was obviously impractical.

It would have required, to seem valid to any realistic British statesman, a close working agreement with three great powers. The United States was clearly not prepared to enter any such accord. Russia, to say nothing of the dubious quality of her democracy, had been going through a series of purges which put an Anglo-Russian agreement out of the picture. France, though allied with Russia, was also plagued by internal disturbance. There was not the strength in European democracy—or so it seemed to Chamberlain—to challenge Germany and Italy in combination.

• • • •

THEREFORE THE BRITISH PREMIER, dropping Anthony Eden and fidelity to League principles together, turned back to the old tradition of the balance of power. He would placate Italy at the moment when Mussolini was nervous, irritable and angry over the German seizure of Austria. He would preserve England's Mediterranean route to the East and end Italy's successful anti-British propaganda among the Arabs. He would, perhaps, soften the Berlin-Rome axis and detach Italy from the German orbit, much as she had been detached in 1914.

For all that a price was necessary. If it had to be paid at the expense of the conscience of the Earl of Perth, so much the worse for him. The question is whether there is room for conscience in the briefcase of a diplomat.

But while it is easy to see how all this has come about, discernment for the future is another problem. Mussolini has given no hostages to fortune. He will obtain recognition of his Ethiopian conquest and possibly loans to give it a utilitarian value heretofore completely lacking. He will obtain a privileged position in Spain, assuming Franco's ultimate victory there.

But in return he gives nothing which implies detachment from the Berlin-Rome axis. On the contrary his present success enables him to hold up his head again with reference to Hitler. It enables him to offer his people prospects which may make them forget the German soldiers camped at the gateway to the plains of northern Italy.

A weakening of the Berlin-Rome axis is by no means necessarily implied. But there is a definite weakening in such solidarity, if any, as the democracies had been able to achieve. The celerity with which the Daladier government in France is now seeking to establish its own entente cordiale with Italy shows this. Great Britain and France, in making pacts with Rome, are drifting away from a closer accord with the United States on the one hand and with Russia on the other. There is no reason to suppose that this will cause any great distress in this country. But it will have profound reactions in Russia.

WITH THE END of Geneva as a political center, Litvinoff's endeavor to associate Russia closely with the League of Nations must also come to an end. With the overthrow of the Popular Front in France and the presumable triumph of a bitterly anti-Communist rebellion in Spain, Russian influence in Western Europe promises to decline to a lower ebb than at any time since the revolution of 1917. Almost inevitably the Moscow government, deprived of prestige in Europe, will turn eastward toward Asia, where many of its most able statesmen have always thought that Russia's destiny lies. The difficulties of Japan in China may make this necessity a virtue from the Communist standpoint.

Russian influence in Europe is Hitler's particular phobia. And it is at least possible that a rebuff to Russia, plus Anglo-French acceptance of his Austrian coup, may make the Fuehrer willing to use less aggressive, more co-operative, means of attaining his ultimate objectives, whatever they may be. There is no longer a Treaty of Versailles to flog. There is no longer a political League of Nations to denounce. There is no longer a cordon sanitaire round Germany or any chance of a working alliance of democracies to keep that country in restraint. Perhaps restraint will now come from within. It may be hoped so.

In any event it is clear that the Anglo-Italian pact marks the end of a chapter in European history. It means a tragic surrender of idealism; the final collapse of much that was inspiring in the Wilsonian experiment. But the possible re-establishment of a Concert of Europe in place of the League of Nations may well, at this juncture, mean a stabilization of peace rather than a further drift toward war.

After the Congress of Vienna a concert of the great European powers kept peace on that continent for 40 years. History seldom repeats; but often it can be very imitative.

Kerensky Will Speak.

Alexander Kerensky, who headed the provisional government of Russia in 1917, between the czarist and Bolshevist regimes, will make an off-the-record speech at a luncheon at the National Press Club Thursday at 12:30 p. m.

Dark Age

By Claude O. Witze.

Plight Of The German Intellectuals.

DR. JULIUS LIPS, of Aryan race, a scientist of international reputation, was head of the Museum of Ethnology at Cologne. His preservation of his intellectual integrity against the Nazi terrorists cost him "his job, his income, his home and his country." The story of what befell him and other intellectuals under the Third Reich has been written simply and eloquently by the wife who has accompanied him into exile.

It is a tragic tale. But, as Miss Dorothy Thompson in her introduction has wisely said, the really tragic figures are not Dr. Lips and his wife, but the "cowards among their friends who betrayed their own highest ideals for the sake of their jobs and their necks."

There was for instance the lawyer Bodenheim who privately scorned the Nazis, but wore their button because it meant power. He scolded Frau Lips for her firmness, but was delighted to read a new book by a Jewish author. And there was the crime commissioner, who removed his swastika from the desk and placed it on the floor next to the cuspidor before opening his heart. This is what the commissioner said:

"One is behind the other; over one little fuehrer stands another, then comes a regional party fuehrer, over this little man the petty chief of the division, then comes a petty state councilor subservient to a councilor of the state, then the minister—and so it goes on up and up until we come to the very top, where a cloud hangs over everything. That is your authoritarian state!"

• • • •

MOST PITIFUL OF ALL perhaps were Eva Lips' father and mother. Her father wrote demanding immediate submission because the "spirit of the new Germany demanded it." Then they paid a visit and the old gentleman begged his son-in-law to "recognize the good intentions hidden behind the initial confusion." While he was speaking a former student arrived to conduct a nonsensical and illegal search of the professor's home.

"'Please excuse the interruption, father; they merely wanted to steal my manuscripts.'

"'But that's intolerable! You must do something about that! I am positive no one in Berlin knows anything about it.'

"'The fuehrer principle, father. Every man is a Hitler on his own.'

"'Don't say that. Berlin will certainly see to it that a World War veteran receives justice.'

"Sometimes," writes Mrs. Lips, "we felt as though they were our children, instead of we theirs."

• • • •

THE PEASANTS and the soldiers and the students had taken charge of a realm that belonged to others, just as they did for Sinclair Lewis in "It Can't Happen Here." The account of the persecutions undergone by Dr. Lips and his wife defy summary and should be left to horrify the reader just as they did when Doremus Jessup was the victim and Buzz Windrip played the role of Hitler. "Savage Symphony" is the tune played for those who are not in the orchestra.

It is hard for Americans to grasp the reality of the Hitlerism, but here is the reality in Frau Lips' words:

". . . he (Hitler) was not sparing of promises to all social classes. Small industry was to be stimulated, the 'thralldom of usury' was to be broken, rents would fall, but property owners would profit thereby. The painters would sell their pictures, the butchers their sausage, the brewers their beer. The peasants would grow rich, the soldiers be armed, students be given appointments and the apprentices would become well-to-do masters. And, above all, unemployment was to cease. Unprecedented economic expansion and increase in foreign trade were to bring wealth to all, to the big businessman and the manual laborer alike . . .

"The tenants and the landlords, the brewers and the peasants, the soldiers, the students, the apprentices and the unemployed heard this. And the next day they went to the polls."

• • • •

BROWNSHIRTED BOORS were sent to scour Dr. Lips' bookshelves clean of Marxism and he was summoned to humiliating hearings in farcical courts on trumped-up charges. In the end Prof. Lips was forced into exile. A few trips to Paris, underground communications from scientific friends in other nations and an offer from Columbia University complete the story. The beautiful home in Cologne was abandoned.

Frau Lips' account of what happens when intelligence meets fascism is probably the most damning indictment of Hitlerism that has yet been written. When the next burning of the books takes place this record will not be lost any more than were those of Mann, Remarque, Tucholsky or Zweig. Ethnologists of the future will have small interest in novels, but they are certain to gasp at the trials of their colleague.

Can it be true, they will ask, that men treated other men this way in the twentieth century?

Village Aesculapian

By Bett Anderson.

WHETHER YOU LIKE to hear about the other fellow's operation or not can hardly affect your pleasure in reading "Fifty Years a Country Doctor," the latest addition to the ever-growing number of books written by our men in white. Its author, Dr. William N. Macartney, is a born raconteur. The fact that he is still practicing medicine at the age of 76, "not from financial necessity but because I love to" is proof of the spirit which has kept him ministering for 50 years to the inhabitants of a small town in northern New York.

Dr. Macartney's graduation from the medical school of the University of the City of New York coincided with Manhattan's enveloping blizzard of 1888. It is characteristic of this old Scotch-Irish medico that he devotes one sentence to his graduation and nearly four pages to the blizzard! Yet in order to complete his studies he had squeezed pennies, worked like a dog on his books and on odd jobs, often eaten at seventh-rate restaurants, and considered a 35-cent Thanksgiving dinner the height of luxury.

After taking a look at some of the answers he used to give to examination questions, the wonder is that he ever secured a degree at all. Asked how he would identify with certainty and determine the strength of a pound bottle of unlabeled hydrochloric acid if one were found in his room, Dr. Macartney replied with more truth than chemistry, "What I would actually do would be to throw the blamed stuff in the gutter, fish out 30 cents, buy a fresh bottle and take no chances."

Dr. Macartney's style is easy-going and humorous with a strong leaning to an over-the-backfence philosophy. But occasionally the very incident of which he writes will lift itself up to the realm of drama. There is nothing in Cronin's "The Citadel," for instance, which can match for stark and thrilling detail Dr. Macartney's account of an emergency operation he performed on a workman with a wound in his neck. Even Dr. Morris' story of his 50 years as a surgeon fails to top this tale.

It took the advent of five baby girls into this world at Callander, Canada, to awaken the realization that the patient, plodding, small-town medico may be as capable as the big-time specialist with every aid known to modern medicine at his command. Dr. Dafoe should get a chuckle or two out of this book. But the colleague who would probably get the greatest kick out of Dr. Macartney's pointed phrases is Dr. Axel Munthe. These two old debunkers scarcely leave hypochondriacs a ligature to stand on!

Priming Foes Say PWA Gifts Bid for Votes

Spend

string of people going in and out of his office in the next fortnight. Apparently convinced that Congress will approve the program, he said the conference will prepare the way for an immediate start on the program as soon as funds are available.

2,727 Projects Waiting.

Ten days of hearings will open before the Appropriations Committee today when Works Progress Administrator Hopkins takes the stand on work relief features of the program. Later in the week, Public Works Administrator Harold Ickes will explain the $1,450,000,000 spending-lending program PWA will administer.

Representative Taber said last night he intends to ask Ickes "where the money is coming from" for recent PWA allocations.

"On the eve of consideration of this bill, allocations are being made for public buildings in order to soften the opposition," charged Taber. "I wonder if any member of the House will be so cheap that his vote can be influenced in that way."

Taber plans to take the floor of the House at noon tomorrow to attack the spending program and to outline a Republican recovery alternative.

Public Works Administration officials said the $3,119,000 allotted last week was not distributed with any regard to political connotations. For example, it was pointed out that nine school projects went to Virginia, and both Virginia Senators, Carter Glass and Harry Flood Byrd, are outstanding Senate critics of PWA "pump priming."

The PWA has a "reservoir" of approximately 2,727 projects already approved, but not yet allocated, aggregating in potential cost about $550,000,000, it was said.

$150,000,000 Plan Sped.

Two features of the new program—$50,000,000 for Civilian Conservation Corps camps and $101,500,000 additional—moved ahead of the main bill yesterday.

The Senate voted the CCC camp increase, previously approved by the House, and this bill now goes to the White House for signing. The money will prevent abolition of 300 camps on July 1.

The Agriculture appropriation bill, carrying only $100,000,000 for highways, was increased to $201,500,000 by the House in fulfillment of White House recommendations. The $37,000,000 additional asked for by Mr. Roosevelt for flood control and reclamation was included in War Department nonmilitary appropriations reported to the House Monday.

Main Bill Weakened.

Foes of the program said privately that separation of these items from the main recovery scheme will weaken its vote-getting strength as the blocs interested in only these items may get what they want before the omnibus bill is approved.

Outspoken opposition to the program in the House was almost entirely confined to Republicans, who are proceeding independently of Democratic coalition backing. In the Senate, both Republicans and conservative Democrats are quietly organizing to modify the program when it reaches that chamber.

Representative Robert L. Bacon (Republican), of New York, introduced in the House yesterday a Republican substitute for the President's relief program providing for distribution of $1,150,000,000 to the States on a grant-aid basis. The money would be allocated by a bipartisan Federal relief board after States and localities guaranteed to provide an additional sum equal to one-third of the amount put up by the Federal Government.

Program Bi-Partisan.

Allocations would be made on a basis of "unemployment and living costs in, and population and financial resources of, the several States." Bipartisan boards of relief trustees would be set up in each State to receive and disburse the sums.

Allocations would be paid quarterly after States and localities satisfied conditions fixed in the bill. An additional $100,000,000 would be provided for the President to make discretionary allotments to meet "extraordinary" emergencies.

Bacon amended his bill yesterday to include the Woodrum amendment, which specifies that distribution of relief funds be spread over the next seven-month period. Leaders already are agreed on inclusion of the Woodrum amendment in the Administration's relief measure.

Woodrum Drops Economy.

Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, is author of the "relief spread" amendment in existing law, and is chairman of the deficiencies sub-committee which will open hearings on the program today. Although an ardent advocate of Government economies in the past, Woodrum has announced his support of the new program.

"I regret as much as any one that such a program is necessary," the Virginia Representative said yesterday, "but I have failed to observe in any of the criticism of this program any constructive suggestions of an alternative."

Woodrum said the new program will "undertake to provide work relief for 2,500,000 of the 12,000,000 to 14,000,000 unemployed. We hope industry can absorb the rest of it."

He said a friend had written him that "if you will reassure business and get the people back to work everything will be fine."

Glass Hits Priming.

"That is a splendid suggestion," continued Woodrum's statement. "We have reassured business, but my friend failed to tell me what to do to give the people jobs. This program is for that purpose and if it is as successful as we hope it will be, then it will be worth what it costs."

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), also of Virginia, yesterday reiterated his opposition to the PWA "pump priming" phase of the program. As chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, he is in a strategic position.

Senator Glass considers the PWA spending-lending authorizations a duplication of the $1,300,000,000 RFC lending bill he sponsored in the Senate "to try to head off this sort of thing." Glass will support the $1,250,000,000 relief proposal.

The Federal Diary

'Sham'

Robert L. Johnson, president, National Civil Service Reform League and America's No. 1 political plum detective, glimpses another plum tree in the postmaster bill adopted by the Senate on the 11th, and, picturesquely, calls it "a sham which is designed to pull the wool over the eyes of the public and lure it into a false belief that postmasterships are actually being placed under the merit system.

He urges the conferees of the House and Senate to substitute the origina' Ramspeck bill in place of the "Senate conversion of that bill into a spoils measures." The league's letter to the House and Senate conferees requests them to eliminate the provisions for the confirmation by the Senate of postmaster appointments; eliminate the provisions for an eight-year term for postmasters, and provide for appointment of acting postmasters only in accordance with the civil service rules.

Without such changes the bill is of no value, Johnson holds. He predicts it would not be acceptable to the public and would invite Executive veto. "As originally passed by the House in January, 1937, the Ramspeck bill was not an ideal proposal, but it was, nevertheless, a reasonably good compromise measure. It should be substituted in place of the Senate conversion of that bill into a spoils measure," he wrote. "The bill as finally passed by the Senate last week, will not help to make the Postoffice Department a business institution. It will perpetuate it as a patronage plum tree."

Editorial

To which we append—and wearily—that it is an issue, deep-rooted, that only the voters back home can do anything about. They simply aren't sufficiently aware of how much time their Senators and Representatives, too, spend in watering the old plum tree. There's no need for the league or anything else to appeal to them. The only thing that will cut down the old plum tree is the voters' axe. And no one knows that any better than those who water the tree. They also know that the voters, to date, are not sufficiently aroused against the spoils system—which is a comforting thought around election times when patronage debts are paid in votes.

Notes

Len De Caux, editor, the C. I. O. News, will address the regular membership meeting of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians tomorrow night. His topic will be: "The Significance of the Coming C. I. O. Convention."

De Caux—because of his official duties—is well able to interpret the events that led to the decision of the 39 unions of the C. I. O. to call a convention in the fall. In his speech he will stress the relationship of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. and emphasize the effect of a permanent set-up for the C. I. O. on labor unity. The speech is one of a series sponsored by the FAECT.

country will some time in the future have to abandon the traditional policy of the United States for more than 100 years in time—or we may have to go to war to insure the territorial integrity of some of those South American nations."

White said he was not worried by talk of American aggression with a big Navy program, or of American "meddling" in Europe, but added, "I am gravely concerned as to whether some of the nations in the Far East and Europe may not bring their meddling here to this continent and to the adjacent waters of this continent."

Avoids Political Aspects.

President Roosevelt's statement, while not commenting on the international political aspects of the Anglo-Italian agreement, made clear that the pact was regarded here "with sympathetic interest."

He said:

As this Government has on frequent occasions made it clear, the United States, in advocating the maintenance of international law and order, believes in the promotion of world peace through the friendly solution by peaceful negotiation between nations of controversies which may arise between them.

It has also urged the promotion of peace through the finding of means for economic appeasement. It does not attempt to pass upon the political features of accords such as that recently reached between Great Britain and Italy, but this Government has seen the conclusion of an agreement with sympathetic interest because it is proof of the value of peaceful negotiations.

British Pact "Possible."

Walsh steered the committee's $1,158,546,000 naval expansion bill swiftly through the day's session, with approval granted to most committee amendments, including one to increase the number of authorized auxiliary vessels from 22 to 26.

Asked if the United States and Great Britain had a secret agreement for naval co-operation, the heavy-set Massachusetts veteran admitted that "it is possible, it is conceivable."

He added at once: "But I have no reason to think that either the President or the State Department has any understanding along the lines suggested."

Borah Drives at Britain.

Senators Gerald P. Nye, North Dakota; Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan; William E. Borah, Idaho, Republicans; George W. Norris, Nebraska, Independent; Ernest Lundeen, Minnesota, Farmer-Laborite, and Chairman Walsh bore the burden of the debate through the day.

Walsh, holding the floor throughout, met the flow of objections to the 20 per cent fleet increase with steady insistence that permanent security for the United States inevitably devolves on a powerful Navy as a first line of defense.

Borah, driving at the rumored Anglo-American naval understanding, asked if Walsh had any information regarding an allegation by Winston Churchill in Parliament that the United States and Great Britain do have such an understanding.

Walsh said: "It's very possible that may be true, but if it is the Navy Department would not know about it." (Churchill is reported to have said that "excellent arrangements" have been concluded between the two powers.)

Norris drove at the present-day "lack of honor among nations" concerning treaties. He said:

"There are several nations in the world, great nations, who are disregarding a policy of honor that was respected and recognized a few years ago by every nation."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman Who Attracts Friends on First Meeting, but Can't Hold Them, Asks Analysis of Her Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am one of those persons who attract others on first meeting but can't seem to hold their interest. I can't understand it. I'm sure it isn't anything personal, for I am extremely careful in matters of grooming. I am not consciously rude, nor am I vulgar or slangy. I gossip moderately. These people continue to be friends, in an impersonal way, but the spark of interest that was there in the beginning vanishes. It isn't men alone. It is also women and children. It's odd, since I feel at ease with anyone, of any type, be he rich or poor. I have never had any trouble getting jobs and am generally credited with being a lot smarter than I really am.

• • • •

Do you suppose I lose friends because my own spontaneity wanes? I always give the impression of being vitally alive at first, but after a time I grow silent. But when one works in an office every day, how can one go out almost every night to some party or dance, get home late, and continue feeling like a million dollars? All my crowd goes constantly and if you can't smoke and drink and stay up till morning and still keep fit, they think you're a sissy. I do these things in moderation but I can't keep the pace that the crowd keeps. Do you suppose this is why I lose out?

• • • •

Surely there must be some men and women who like a person for something else than a good time. If I don't do as the crowd does, it means being left behind; for if I don't go where I'm asked, they ask someone else. I am frequently scoffed at because of my moral ideas. They tell me I'm not modern. But I hope to marry some day and I disapprove of lax morality. Am I old-fashioned and prudish? Please tell me what you think. I want to be the right sort of person and still I don't want to be lonesome. (Am I just self-centered?) DAILY READER.

What to Believe.

DEAR DAILY READER: Since you are able to attract persons at first meeting, but cannot hold their interest, it seems logical to suppose your appearance and superficial social manners are excellent; but that your personality is lacking in warmth, sympathy, sincerity, restfulness and, perhaps, genuine gaiety. If you are, indeed, "generally credited with being a lot smarter" than you really are, it must mean either that you don't talk enough (since silence often gives an appearance of mental profundity to what is really mental vacuity) or that you alienate others by assuming the air of one who knows all the answers.

• • • •

There is a give and take quality to really stimulating conversation. While bringing freshness and definiteness of viewpoint to every discussion (thus showing a vigorous and enterprising mind) the pleasing conversationalist is, at the same time, hospitable—in the sense of being attentively receptive—to the other person's opinions and conclusions on the same subject. His attitude implies that while he may not be prepared, at the moment, to accept the other person's ideas in entirety, nevertheless he finds them interesting food for thought. His attitude toward his own ideas is, simply, that they are his ideas; but by no means nor necessarily the final word to be said on the subject. An attitude of willingness to learn from the other fellow; of finding his viewpoint original and even impressive, leaves the party of the second part with a very agreeable taste in his mouth, and a high opinion of the intelligence, graciousness and general desirability of his conversational vis-a-vis.

• • • •

It is possible that a cue to part of your difficulty is to be found in your statement: "I feel at ease with anyone, of any type, be he rich or poor." Nobody likes to be taken too much for granted; nobody likes to feel that he is to be taken easily in another's social stride. Rich or poor, shy or bold, magnetic or unprepossessing, learned or unschooled, each individual carries within himself a conviction of special but generally unrecognized personal uniqueness, and likes to feel that those he meets discern his special qualities and are at some pains to become acquainted with them in their rich entirety.

• • • •

Perhaps your sense of ease gives an overtone of complacency to your personality; perhaps you are so very much at ease that you offend, sooner or later, by an air of imperiousness cocksureness. Sometimes those persons who, in their hearts, feel anything but adequate in their social interchange, contrive to bring the greatest warmth, reassurance and lovability to a social encounter. A certain shyness of manner, when combined with inner poise, cultivated intelligence and special attentiveness to others, makes for the sweetest sort of charm. Bland ease suggests self-satisfaction, essential insensitivity and nothing much below the surface. Shyness, on the other hand, suggests a gauzy cloak of reserve which arouses the interest of others as to what lies beneath.

• • • •

Perhaps you have a mind and social repertory so scantily stocked that all your cards have been placed on the table, so to speak, after a few encounters. Not being particularly impressed with what they see, or have found, and it being apparent that nothing further is forthcoming in the way of personality resources and surprises, your once-enthusiastic admirers may turn from you in boredom or actual disappointment.

• • • •

Perhaps your greatest mistake has been in neglecting to cultivate your own mind and soul, through reaching breathlessly for the brass ring of popularity on a meaningless social merry-go-round. Nothing could be more mistaken than the supposition that one can find lasting friendships in a crowd which places a greater premium on "a good time" than on superior personal values. If your so-called friends are so very fair-weather that they would swap you at the drop of a hat for someone else whose wind is a little stronger, the greatest contribution you can make to yourself is to drop out of the procession they constitute right now, and seek companionship of a more temperate and rational-minded sort. There are plenty of "men and women who like a person for something else than a good time." But it's hard to meet them in the night-life crowd, for the good and sufficient reason that they seldom mingle in it.

• • • •

As for asking whether or not you are "old-fashioned and prudish" for disapproving of "lax morality" and whether (in effect) one has to scrap personal decency of conduct in order to conform to modern standards of behavior—such questions are, to my mind, too rudimentary for a grown-up to have to ask. If you don't know the answer, you are, indeed, "generally credited with being a lot smarter than you really are."

• • • •

It may interest you to know that really advanced standards of modery morality—in the sense of being latest fashion—tend more to strictness than to laxity. Whoever thinks today that he is being smart by violating as many of the Ten Commandments as he can safely and secretly get away with is hopelessly out of date. He is aping the vulgar manners of the immediately post-war generation, long since scorned by those who make pretensions to knowing what it is all about and behaving accordingly. There is taking place in the world today, my dear woman, a long since overdue revival of interest in, and knowledge and appreciation of, matters and values spiritual, and lives and manners are being revised to fit a higher, happier and saner standard than prevailed in the Terrific Twenties.

Wallis' Newest Hat Is Black, Rose Trimmed

Other hats chosen by Paris society women include an Egyptian bonnet with large ears of grosgrain ribbon, a Tanagra straw stitched with a large butterfly, and several large turbans with petals of bright shades scattered here and there on the crown.

Chic for Important Afternoons

AFTERNOON dresses are a "must" in the design for living in Washington, and the one above is particularly attractive, suitable for wear now and all through the summer. Starched silk navy marquisette is the cool and smart material with very deep hem of silk taffeta. Scattered bows of matching taffeta and a jeweled heart, are the effective decorative mediums. The chic pill-box hat is fashioned of natural-colored straw; a striking contrast to the navy costume.

Lillian Gish Urges Modern Women to Keep 'Gentleness'

"Keep your gentleness if you want to make the most of modern feminine freedom."

"Undoubtedly," she said, "women's chief perplexity right now is what to do with their new independence in a confused society. I feel certain they will find the way out of their difficulties if they hold fast to the quality of tenderness no matter how hard the going becomes.

"Many women active in economic affairs have been criticized for cultivating a hard, forbidding exterior. This cold outside has been considered by some persons a betrayal of the finest feelings and expressions of women through the ages. My opinion is that the hard exterior doesn't go very deep, even when it seems to be impenetrable."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April, 19.

EVERYWHERE IN this great land, from Dan to Beersheba and even in the streets of Ascalon, houses are being torn to shreds and put together again. For once we put aside childish things, and go at the serious business of housecleaning. And we New Yorkers who live in caves and cliffs have problems that never faced my household when I was a child in New Hampshire.

ALICE HUGHES

There, with great huffing and puffing, all the rugs were lugged into the back yard and beaten to death. I can see the old-fashioned lace curtain frames to this day. We made a headlong attack on the winter's accumulation of topsoil and drove it into the open air—on which it rode blithely to the next door neighbor's. How different is the reddening-up in the heart of an over-crowded city like this!

We haven't any yards, except the stony area six flights down. The whole system of shaking out the house has been changed, and, to tell the truth, probably for the better. All the gadgets of modern science are now at our command, and electricity replaces the elbow-grease expended by our mothers. I went to Mrs. Helen Arundel, instructor in house management at our Pratt Institute, to get the latest up-to-the-second word on the annual shambles. I was reassured.

Most of the drudgery has been eliminated," she says. "Rugs, carpets and blankets can be sent to a cleaner who will store them free for three months. Most modern walls and woodwork are washable. Of course, the vacuum cleaner is invaluable. Two or three days at most should put a modern six-room house or apartment in perfect spring order."

I hope and trust Mrs. Arundel is right. She should know. Yet I still think with vague nostalgia of the rug-thumping in our old back yard, and the sacred curtain-frames. Fie on me—I'm reactionary, and badly dated!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I suppose the new arrival at the Doinnes was a bit of an anti-climax, after the miracle of four years ago. Even so, one of the local papers wrote a head on the story which I still remember joyfully. It said, simply: "It's a Singleton at the Dionnes" . . .

• • • •

Lovely Merle Oberon, most famous export of far-off Tasmania, has been spending two busy weeks shopping and playgoing here, and the old town has looked better for her presence. Extraordinarily pretty girl, even in technicolor, as you who have seen "The Divorce of Lady X" well know. Now she's off to Hollywood to appear in "Graustark" with Gary Cooper and Sigrid Gurie. . . . Another nice movie girl among us is little Rochelle Hudson, who intends to stay quite a spell, for she has taken a month's lease on a hotel suite . . .

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

SO YOU ARE LOOKING for a novel way to diet? Well, never let it be said that I refused to co-operate! Here you are . . . three diets that are as different as you could wish, and with conversational appeal thrown in, since many of you feel there is no use in dieting if you can't talk about your diet!

On the first plan you can eat anything and everything you please (I know this doesn't sound like me! But wait—) provided you begin lunch and dinner with one-half head of lettuce. You are supposed to thoroughly chew each leaf, and by the time you have finished you will discover that you are not nearly as hungry as you had thought. Eating half a head of lettuce before your meal will make your jaws tired and take the sharp edge off your appetite. You will leave the table before you have reached your calorie requirement.

You must, of course, use either French dressing or vinegar and seasoning on the lettuce. You will feel as if you are on bunny fare, but actually you can count on losing two pounds per week by this plan. It has been done!

The second scheme is to eat five meals a day. That's right, five! According to dietetic experiments your energy needs are more adequately covered by taking food at frequent intervals. It certainly is a good way to prevent that all-gone sensation that makes you feel reducing is not worth the struggle. This unpleasant feeling, we are told, is apt to be more than mere emptiness. It can be an actual weakness resulting from the exhaustion of available energy and reduced blood sugar. The in-between-meal food, however, is not extra, and there is no increase in the total calories for the day. The idea is to have a glass of fruit juice, a banana, a hot drink or glass of skim milk at 10:30 a. m., and again at 3:30 p. m., cutting down slightly on the two main meals as suggested in today's menu.

If you have for years gained weight on just three meals, see what you can do about reducing on five. By holding your food intake down to the 1,200 or 1,400 calories your activity allows, you can lose weight on this plan and it may be the solution to your figure problem.

Or, if you can't seem to put any faith in five meals a day for reducing, try two meals a day—that is the plan for people who do not like the idea of a diet no matter how it is presented. Ever since reducing became the fashion, a good percentage of the overweights have insisted on going without breakfast, eating a very spare lunch, and then overeating at dinner. This idea will work if you reverse the process. Take a whacking good breakfast with bacon and eggs, fruit juice, toast and coffee, and you can have jam on the toast, cream and sugar with the coffee. Then for lunch eat everything you want, including dessert. But no dinner! No, no dinner. Nothing from lunch until the next breakfast except plain water, but plenty of that.

As you can see, there is more than one way to eat and grow slim, and the following menu is a sample of what you can do with five meals a day.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Handy Man.

"Now you stand on the arm of this chair—wait, take off your shoes first—and I'll hand you the curtains. See, the rods fit in those little notches."

"I know! I know! It's all simple enough. Just wait till I get my balance—say, let go my leg, will you!"

"I'm only trying to keep you from falling."

"ME fall! I won't fall if you tend to your business and keep the chair steady. Now, then, hand me the curtains. Which end does this thing go in?"

"Right over there—No, higher. You lift it up and——"

"I know! I know! Just a minute and I'll get the hang of it." Wait! This bracket's loose. Hand me a nail . . . No, a NAIL! Not the hammer!

"Wait! Wait! You're not driving it right! It's crooked."

"Say, who's doing this job? Hold that chair steadier, will you? Now, the hammer. Say—this n a i l 's crooked. Give me another. Doggone these nails——"

"Now, please, don't get excited."

"Excited! I'm not excited! You're the one's that excited. If you'd just keep your shirt on—here, gimme another nail. You hand me the curtain."

"Wait! You've got it wrong! You have to lift that little end up and bring it over——"

"I know! I know! Say, what on earth's the matter with this catch? It won't work . . . Now what in the dickens! Say I'd just like to meet the fool that invented this! . . . Eh! So you won't go in, will you? . . . Well, I'll show you! I'll make you! I'll . . . I'll——"

"Oh, wait, wait! You're breaking it—Oh, there! It's all ruined!"

"Here! Take your old curtain! I'm THROUGH! Call in some common workman and let him fix it."

'Salable' Recipes Will Win 5 Prizes In Post Contest

Do you always find your dishes selling first at the food sales? Do you have the double rich chocolate cakes that are so much in demand? Or the custard cream cocoanut pie with light, flaky pastry? Perhaps you have something that is unusual and cherished by members of your church, such as a special recipe for party cakes or holiday candies. These are the types of recipes that will win you a cash prize this week in the contest.

All dishes that have made a hit at food sales or community dinners have an equal chance in this contest. The Post is awarding five prizes. The first is $3, the second $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each.

Your dish may be a macaroni casserole with an unusual ham or meat seasoning, a light-bread recipe that has the old fashioned home made flavor, a steamed pudding dish that is rich and money-making. Whatever dish your club has found successful is the choice.

To enter, white out your recipe, give clear directions for preparation and mail to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before April 23.

WASHINGTON SALAD.

4 tomatoes
1 cucumber
2 green peppers
1 tablespoon of finely chopped onion
½ teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon of A-1 sauce
Salt
Pepper
Paprika
¼ teaspoon of dry mustard
1 teaspoon of sugar
1 pilot cracker
2 tablespoons of sour cream

Peel the cucumber and tomato, slice thin. Slice the green pepper paper thin. Drain of their juices. Soak the crackers in cold water for three minutes and squeeze dry. Place a layer of the vegetable mixture in a bowl and sprinkle with a chopped onion and cracker. Spread with sour cream to which the above spices and sauces have been added. Repeat until all ingredients are used. Place on ice for three hours. Serve on crisp lettuce.

Honey Cookies.

Cakes and cookies in which honey is used as sweetening require a moderate temperature for baking. If the oven is too hot they will burn. Since the temperature for cooking is lower, it is best to toast the cereal used in honey cereal cookies before blending them with other ingredients. This removes any trace of a raw cereal taste.

White House Social Calendar Closed for Season With Dinner for 91 Guests; Musicale Follows

Misses Kagan and Doty and Mr. Gherardi Present Selections; Eight Senators, Seven Representatives Are in Party.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Winding up their calendar of formal functions for the season, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt last evening entertained at one of the largest dinners on the White House calendar this year.

Among their 91 guests were eight Senators, seven Representatives, several representatives of Government departments and agencies, a scattering of Army and Navy officials and a few out-of-towners. Later, a number of additional guests came in for the musicale, featuring Miss Pescha Kagan, pianist; Miss Marilyn Doty, violinist, and William Gherardi, tenor.

Pink roses, white spiraea and maidenhair fern were used to decorate the horseshoe table, which was turned out with a silver service—instead of the gold one most frequently used for formal events—and the Roosevelt china and glassware. Shortly after 8 o'clock guests sat down to dinner, having been received a few minutes earlier in the east room, to which they were escorted by naval and military aides, while the scarlet-coated Marine Band played.

Following the dinner, guests went back to the east room, where they were joined by a large company, including a number of residential Washingtonians. A varied selection of numbers, representing the works of Debussy, Chopin, Wagner, Beethoven, Verdi and Kreisler among others, made up the program. Miss Margaret Alexander and Leo Edward Heim were accompanists.

Several Republicans Included in Company

Guests who attended the dinner and also the musicale were Senator Frederick Hale, of Maine; Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware; Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina; Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Mrs. O'Mahoney; Senator Francis T. Maloney, of Connecticut, and Mrs. Maloney; Senator George L. Radcliff, of Maryland; Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington, and Mrs. Schwellenbach; Senator Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, and Mrs. Chavez.

The seven members of the House who were there, with their wives, included Representative Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, and Mrs. Hope; Representative Harry L. Haines, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Haines; Representative John D. Dingell, of Michigan, and Mrs. Dingell; Representative Edward C. Eicher, of Iowa, and Mrs. Eicher; Representative Herman P. Kopplemann, of Connecticut, and Mrs. Kopplemann; Representative Donald H. McLean, of New Jersey, and Mrs. McLean; Representative Harold H. Mosier, of Ohio, and Mrs. Mosier.

Roswell Magill, Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Magill were there; also, Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, and Mrs. Sayre; Adolph A. Berle, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Berle; Sam E. Whitaker, Assistant Attorney General, and Mrs. Whitaker; Ramsey S. Black, of the Postoffice Department, and Mrs. Black; Charles V. McLaughlin, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Mrs. McLaughlin.

From the Army and Navy contingent came Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Conard, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Gilbert J. Rowcliff, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Henry Gibbins, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. F. W. Boschen, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Allen W. Gullion, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ben Moreel. John McKee, of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, was there with Mrs. McKee; also Chester C. Davis, from the same board, with Mrs. Davis; the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Ernest G. Draper, and Mrs. Draper, and Walter M. W. Splawn, of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

John Barbirolli Among the Guests

A guest who was the center of much attention was John Barbirolli, conductor of the New York Philharmonic. Dr. and Mrs. Frank Bohn were in the company, as were George T. Bye, literary agent, and Mrs. Bye. Others there included Mr. and Mrs. W. Turner Catledge, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sill Clark, jr., of Philadelphia; Miss Harriet Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, the former Gov. of North Carolina and Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Greenbaum, Col. and Mrs. Edwin A. Halsey, George Harrison, and Mrs. Denman Kountze, of Omaha, who is the house guest of Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock.

Miss Woodward Becomes Bride

Miss Marjorie Helen Woodward, daughter of Mrs. Ida M. Woodward, yesterday became the bride of Maximilian Newman Brinkman, son of Mrs. Flora Brinkman and the late William A. Brinkman. The ceremony took place at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart at 10 o'clock in the morning, with the Rev. Wente officiating. The Rev. Dr. Joseph Marling was also present in the sanctuary.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, George Woodward, was attired in a white lace redingote over white satin. She wore a long veil and carried a bouquet of white roses, gardenias and sweet peas.

Sister Serves As Maid of Honor

Miss Virginia M. Woodward, her sister, served as her maid of honor and was gowned in a blue net dress fashioned with puffed sleeves and a full skirt. Her shoulder-length veil was also of blue net. She carried yellow roses and blue delphinium. The bridesmaid was Miss Mary Genevieve Brinkman, sister of the bridegroom. She was attired in a dress fashioned like that of the maid of honor but of which the color was pink. Her flowers were pink roses and blue delphinium.

William Brinkman, the bridegroom's brother, was best man, while the ushers were John Coiner and Stewart Foley.

Reception After Wedding Ceremony

At the reception which took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Sheridan, on Monroe street the mother of the bride wore a dress of lilac colored net and lace, a matching hat and a corsage of gardenias.

After a motor trip to Rochester, N. Y., the couple will make their home at Falkland Courts on Sixteenth street.

The bride, the daughter of the late George H. Woodward is a graduate of Sacred Heart Academy. Mr. Brinkman is an alumnus of Catholic University.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Martin was hostess at a cocktail party at the Mayflower for her sister, Mrs. Hay. Tomorrow Mrs. Hughes is giving a luncheon for Mrs. Hay and on Friday she will be the guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by Mrs. Walter Wyatt.

Mrs. Martin has been visiting her parents for almost a month and plans to remain for a while longer. Her sister, however, is only here for the week.

To Visit the Enos.

Mrs. Hollister Sturges, of New York City, will arrive in Washington on Friday to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps Eno for several days.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

FRANCE'S No. 1 baseball fan is coming to Washington at the right time, now that the season for this sport has officially opened. He is the distinguished Count Rene de Chambrun, who with his countess arrives here next week.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Count de Chambrun has admired the American national game since he saw his first World Series in 1919. Even today he still remembers who won.

Son of Gen. Count Adelbert de Chambrun and Countes de Chambrun, who visitor is a nephew of the late Nicholas Longworth. His mother was Longworth's sister and is widely known as author of several technical books about Shakespeare and of an autobiography, "Shadows Like Myself."

• • • •

COUNT DE CHAMBRUN was born in this country and is an honorary American citizen owing to the fact that one of his ancestors was the Marquis de Lafayette. Since a Frenchman's wife takes her husband's nationality, Countess de Chambrun shares both French and United States citizenship with her husband.

She, by the way, is no more a stranger here than the count, for, the daughter of Pierre Laval, the countess visited Washington in 1931 when her father came to see President Hoover. She acted as his secretary when the former French prime minister was establishing a record as Europe's prime traveling salesman in the interests of peace. Laval is now more or less out of the public eye, although he is Senator from Auvergne.

We prophesy that a large number of parties will be given for the de Chambruns, who are already engaged for luncheon at the French Embassy April 29.

The men who publish and edit the Nation's news are now being written about themselves for a change, as newspaper bigwigs meet for a convention here tomorrow. Among those already here is Roy Roberts, head man of the Kansas City Star and close friend of Alf Landon. Mr. Roberts knows many people in the Capital, and came on earlier in the winter to attend the first Gridiron dinner.

Coming tomorrow are Mr. and Mrs. Sevellon Brown, of Providence, R. I. Mrs. Brown is a sister of Maj. David S. Barry, of Washington, and is the daughter of the late David Barry, for many years sergeant-at-arms of the Senate. Maj. Barry, incidentally and unfortunately, is confined to Johns Hopkins these days with a back injury. His brother-in-law and sister will be at the Fairfax during their stay.

• • • •

MR. AND MRS. Walter Lippmann will entertain at luncheon on Friday for President James B. Conant, of Harvard University, where the columnist was a member of the class of 1910. President Conant is among those addressing the newspaper convention.

The Lippmanns returned recently from their wedding trip and are installed in the Col. William Donovan house on R street in Georgetown, which, until they moved in, was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Gaspar Bacon.

THE PARTIES keep on piling up now that Washington's "little season" is here. The always original John Caswells have cards out for a "post moving day" cocktail party in honor of the former Austrian Minister and Frau Prochnik. The affair, no doubt the first of its kind, will take place a week from today, from 5 until 7, at the Caswell residence, 1826 Twenty-fourth street. The Prochniks expect to move Monday from the former legation to their much smaller house, which is near the Caswells. As it must be something of a wrench for them to leave their former home, this party should cheer up the former diplomat and his attractive wife . . . Another date to be marked on the calendar is Thursday, May 5, when the Counselor of the Danish legation, Wilhelm Eickhoff, will entertain at cocktails at his residence, 2146 Wyoming avenue.

• • • •

Manuel Pereira, first secretary of the Chilean Embassy, will embark May 10 to return to this country after a vacation of several months in Chile.

Visitor Here.

Senator and Mrs. Homer T. Bone have as their guests at the Mayflower Mrs. James C. Stevens, of Takoma, Wash., who will remain until the adjournment of Congress, and Mrs. William Laird McCormick, also of Takoma, who will be here until the end of the month.

John T. Talman Married Here

St. Thomas Episcopal Church yesterday was the scene of the wedding of Miss June M. Du Mont and John T. Talman. The ceremony was at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, with Dr. Howard S. Wilkenson, rector of the church, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Verne Barbos, of Sheboygan, Wis., while Mr. Talman is the son of Mrs. John T. Talman, of Washington, and the late Capt. Talman, U. S. A.

Given in marriage by her brother, Charles S. Du Mont, of Madison, Wis., Miss Du Mont was attired in a white marquisette dress trimmed with satin applique. She also wore a short face veil. Her flowers were white lilacs.

Miss Dorothy Swanson, of Milwaukee, was her maid of honor and only attendant. She wore iris blue marquisette, and carried spring flowers. Ned Talman was the best man, while Robert Talman and G. B. Butler served as ushers.

At the reception which took place at 1615 New Hampshire avenue, the mother of the bride was costumed in navy blue net, while the mother of the bridegroom wore light blue crepe.

On their return from their wedding trip, the couple will make their home at 1815 Kenyon street.

The British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay will have as their guests this week-end Mrs. Cornelius Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. William Delano and Mr. and Mrs. Laurence White, all of New York.

Mr. Tattersall Weds N. Y. Girl

Of interest to a number of persons who knew John Carlon Tattersall when he attended Georgetown University here is his wedding to Miss Jessie Hutcheson yesterday morning in the Assumption Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Hutcheson, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Johnstone, Scotland. Mr. Tattersall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tattersall, of Fort Monroe, Va. He attended the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University, where he received his bachelor of science in Foreign Service in 1933, and master of science in 1934. He is now executive assistant of the Waterman Steamship Agency of New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Augur Willcox, who were married on Monday, sailed yesterday on the liner Georgic from New York to Bermuda. Mrs. Willcox is the former Miss Christine Long, and is the daughter of the former Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. Breckinridge Long.

Others from Washington already in Bermuda are Miss Nina Jean Nichols and Mrs. Chleo Spencer, who are at the Belmont Manor. Miss Faith Fahnestock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harris Fahnestock, of New York, is at Tucker's Tavern there.

In Atlantic City.

New French Envoy Gives Dinner For District's Social Notables

English Ambassador and Lady Lindsay Are Ranking Guests at Affair Given by Count Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin.

The French Ambassador, Count Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin, entertained last evening at a dinner at which the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay were ranking guests.

Others present included the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Marc Peter, the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme Constantin Fotitch, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, the Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Countess Roberti, and the Third Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Anthony Rumbold.

Among other guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mrs. Edwin Watson, Countess de Dampierre, who is visiting the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch, and her son, Count de Boulloche.

Also on the French Ambassador's list of engagements yesterday was the weekly luncheon of the Women's National Press Club, at which he was guest of honor. An unusually large company of newspaper women and their guests heard his brief, witty, off-the-record speech.

Among the guests were Mme. Emmanuel Lombard, wife of the Military Attache of the French Embassy, who wore a becoming white-dotted brown frock with a brown turban and beige gloves; Mrs. Blair Bannister, Assistant Treasurer of the United States, whose trim black dress was set off with a wide-brimmed black and white hat; Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, better known as Katherine Dunlap, novelist and civic worker, who chatted in French with the Ambassador; Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, who was accompanied by her house guest, Mrs. Nelson J. Ruggles, of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Ralph Brewster, wife of Representative Brewster of Maine, and Mrs. P. C. Frush, mother of Mrs. Richard L. Wilson, a member of the club.

Also attending the luncheon was Dr. Ruth Alexander, widely-known lecturer of Chicago, who addressed a meeting of the D. A. R. on Monday. Dr. Alexander is the wife of Raymond Redheffer, president of the Merchandise National Bank of Chicago.

May McMillen Plights Troth

Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. McMillen, of Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Caroline May, to Philip M. Fairbanks, of Washington.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Western High School and George Washington University. She is a member of Sigma Kappa and Phi Delta Delta sororities.

Mr. Fairbanks attended Sidwells' Friend School and Deerfield Academy and graduated from Yale University in 1935. He will finish at George Washington University Law School in June. He is a member of Phi Delta Phi Fraternity and is editor of the Law Review.

The wedding will take place early in July.

Baroness Gives Up D. C. Home to Move Near to Annapolis

Baroness von Ascheberg, who has rented her Georgetown house to Mr. and Mrs. Graham Parsons, will reside at Gresham, an old estate near Annapolis, after extensive alterations have been completed.

Parts of the house are said to date back to 1683 and in the Civil War Gresham was owned and occupied by Commander Mayo.

D. A. R. Group Plans Breakfast

A breakfast for the members of the Junior American Citizens Committee of the National D. A. R. will be held this morning at 7:45 at the Mayflower Hotel. Miss Elizabeth Barnes, of Washington, a national vice chairman, is in charge of arrangements, and Mrs. Ralph E. Wisner, of Detroit, who heads the committee, will preside.

Mrs. Wisner has just completed a tour of 11 States, in 6 of which she attended State conferences. The 9,000-mile trip was made possible through the generous contribution of a committee member in Colorado, desirous of extending the project.

Guests at the breakfast this morning will include Mrs. William A. Becker, president general; Mrs. Russell William Magna, honorary president general; Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., incoming president general; Mrs. E. Thomas Boyd, chaplain general; Mrs. James H. McDonald, vice president general, from Michigan; Mrs. Charles E. Goodhue, of Illinois, historian general; Mrs. J. Harris Baughman, vice president general, Louisiana; Mrs. Luther Eugene Tomm, librarian general, Oklahoma.

Among others will be Mrs. Lillian Thatcher, of Colorado, State chairman of approved schools; Mrs. Harold B. Gardner of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Miss Eleanor Greenwood, of Massachusetts, both vice chairmen of the national committee.

There has been an increase of more than 20,000 Junior American Citizens this year and the organization of 600 new clubs. About 81,000 children belong and have monthly or fortnightly meetings carrying out programs designed to give them a foundation in American citizenship.

Democrats Hear PWA Art Talk

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., guest speaker at the Woman's National Democratic Club dinner last night, described high lights of murals in Government buildings of the Nation, done under auspices of the Procurement Division and section of painting and sculpture of the Treasury Department.

Mrs. Morgenthau declared she laid "no claims to being an expert in the field of art," then belied her words by giving a fine exposition of the merits of murals created under Treasury Department auspices, with 45 slides to illustrate. The murals include the work of such artists as Henry Varnum Poor, Ward Lockwood, Leon Kroll, Boardman Robinson and Zorach, the sculptor, as well as other not so well known artists.

In outlining the Treasury Department's program of decoration for its public buildings—the post-offices and customs offices of the country—Mrs. Morgenthau pointed out the advantages to artists of the country in holding anonymous competitions which preclude any possible favoritism. She commented, in this connection, on the "younger talents" brought out by this method.

Contrasting the cost to the Government of painting and sculpture previous to the anonymous competition system, she said:

Mrs. Morgenthau was introduced by Mrs. Blair Banister, Assistant Treasurer of the United States. At the speakers' table also were Emily Newell Blair, past president of the club, and her guest, Mrs. Fred Reiter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Keating, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, and Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham.

Washington Wells Club Honors College Official at Luncheon

Alumnae Here Joins in National Program Marking Easter Tuesday; Mrs. Rusk Outlines Activities at School.

The traditional Easter Tuesday luncheon of the Wells College Alumnae, held in all cities where there are Wells clubs, was given by the Washington group yesterday in the Queen Elizabeth room of the Raleigh Hotel. Mrs. William Sener Rusk, the acting dean of the college, was the guest of honor, and in an informal talk after the luncheon, brought the latest news of the activities of Wells. Of special interest to the guests was her explanation of the new honor system; a description of the interdepartmental co-operation in the subject major in the field of esthetics; also the plans for May Day, the most important event of the season, a joint project of the departments of music, fine arts and English in the production of Milton's "Samson Agonistas," Prof. Nicolas Nabokoff, head of the department of music, is writing the incidental music for this production.

Among the guests who were seated at the large oval table were Mrs. Rusk, Mrs. Frederick Ballard, the president of the Washington Wells Club; Mrs. C. C. Schiffeler, Mrs. Horace Dawson, Miss Hale, Miss Francis Brown, Miss Jean Williamson, Mrs. E. B. Wilson, jr., Mrs. Herbert Coward, Mrs. J. . . O'Neil, Mrs. Perkins Coville, Miss Mildred Terrett, Mrs. Charles Neff, Mrs. Mitchell Carroll, Mrs. James Graham, Mrs. Irving Ketchum, Mrs. Walton Ferris, Mrs. Marcellus Sheild, Miss Mary Lebaree, Mrs. T. M. Corner, Mrs. Troughton and Mrs. George Whitney.

On Monday afternoon, Mrs. George G. Whitney, whose house guest Mrs. Rusk is during her stay in Washington, entertained informally at tea, so that a number of the younger girls who are interested in college, together with their mothers, might meet Mrs. Rusk. Mrs. Whitney's two daughters, the Misses Margaret and Barbara Whitney, are students at Wells, as are the Misses Sally and Nancy Fleming, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Fleming, and Miss Beryl Marshall, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. James C. Marshall, of Alexandria.

Mrs. Lawson Plays Hostess at Concert Of Alumnae Group

Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was hostess last night at a musicale given at the federation headquarters, 1734 N street, by the Washington Alumnae group of Sigma Alpha Iota, national music sorority. Receiving with Mrs. Lawson was Mrs. Fred L. Knoblock, president of the Washington group. Mrs. Lawson wore a gown of black net and Mrs. Knoblock was attired in blue lace.

Work Is Begun On Waterfront Improvement

Once Destined for Port.

In the days of George Washington and Thomas Jefferson, it was believed that this city, thanks to the Potomac, might become a great port. The coming of the railroads exploded that prospect. Nevertheless, Washington has a surprisingly large amount of water traffic, made up of both commercial and pleasure craft.

John A. Remon, chairman of the rivers and harbors committee of the the Washington Board of Trade, alluded to this yesterday in opening the ceremonies that started the beautification program.

"Washington," Remon said, "bows to no city in the country in its development of parks, playgrounds and other land recreational facilities. On the other hand, few comparable cities have so neglected their waterfronts.

"This work is just the beginning of a far-reaching project to increase the commercial and utility value of our waterfront. It will make its marine facilities worthy of the Nation's Capital.

More May Have Boats.

"Furthermore, what has always seemed to me quite important, it will help provide the citizens of moderate means the same opportunity to maintain a boat or engage in recreational activities on the water as he now enjoys at such low cost on the land.

"Washington has 3,200 acres of navigable water which may be used for recreation."

Remon said that, after the waterfront of the Washington channel has been improved, similar improvements will be made in Georgetown and along the Anacostia branch of the Potomac.

Senator Copeland who, as chairman of a committee that handles river and harbor improvements, helped Washington to get the legislation which now is bearing fruit, told the crowd that, as a young man, he made a tour of Europe and was impressed by the care taken of the waterfronts over there.

Planned for America.

He said he promised himself that if he ever had a chance he would do something to improve waterfront appearances in this country.

"This city ought to be the model city of our country," Copeland said, "and that means of the world. So we are starting out today to make this waterfront a model for every city and town that has a waterfront."

The New York statesman paid a glowing tribute to the Army Engineer Corps, which will be in charge of the project. He also had something to say about the current fight for suffrage here.

"I am hoping," he said, "that the time will come when your affairs will not be settled in a smoky committee room on Capitol Hill, but by the citizens of the District of Columbia themselves."

Other speakers were Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Frank Addison, vice president of the Board of Trade; Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, chief of the Army Engineer Corps; Maj. W. D. Luplow, Army engineer officer in charge of the project, and Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, assistant to Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan.

2 Killed as Floods Sweep Northwest

Wallace, Idaho, April 19 (AP).—Two men were swept to their deaths in the swollen Coeur d'Alene River this afternoon when they slipped from a weakened dike at Rose Lake, about 30 miles west of this flood-stricken mining city.

Floods left hundreds homeless in Washington, western Montana and northern Idaho.

In the Okanogan Valley of north central Washington the Wagner Dam gave way. Twenty-five homes and business places were swept into the Okanogan River at Halott. Three hundred families were reported homeless along the St. Joe River.

Ford Accepts Bid to Confer With Roosevelt on Business

Parley Fires Speculation on Changes in New Deal.

Announcement that Henry Ford, steadfast foe of the NRA, NLRB and other New Deal undertakings, had accepted an invitation to discuss business conditions with President Roosevelt, last night stirred a wave of conjecture in the Capital.

The possible nature of the discussion, what grounds, if any, there might be for an agreement of views between the motor car manufacturer and the Chief Executive, and whether Ford's well known attitude toward the Administration policies might bring any alteration in the Government attitude toward business all were speculated on.

Date Set Next Wednesday.

Word spread here that the appointment for next Wednesday was the result of an invitation carried to Ford by G. Hall Roosevelt, brother of the President's wife and former Detroit city comptroller. He was reported by the Associated Press from Detroit to have conferred with both Henry and Edsel Ford yesterday and then to have sent word of the acceptance to the White House.

Questions asked at the President's press conference yesterday afternoon, meanwhile, had brought no confirmation or denial of the report that Ford was to be a White House caller.

Prior to his White House visit, the Associated Press reported from Detroit, Ford will be a guest here of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, which will meet here tomorrow and Friday. On the day after he is to see the President the manufacturer is to deliver the principal address at the annual dinner of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association in New York.

Refused to Join NRA.

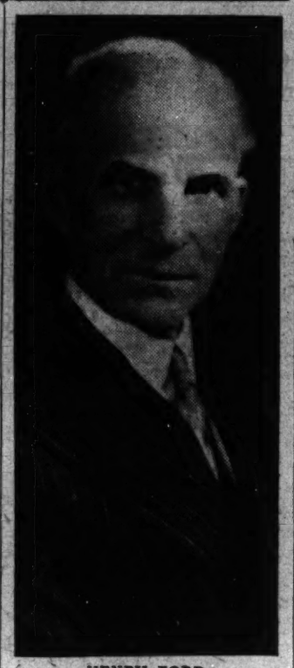
Ford's determined stand in opposition to Government policies inaugurated in 1933 was typified by his continued refusal to join the NRA. And when Ford bids to supply motor cars and trucks to the Government were rejected on the ground they were not certified as to NRA compliance, numerous court suits resulted.

The Ford Motor Co.'s labor policies were subjected to threat of investigations on the charge that workers had been dismissed in defiance of NRA rules.

Ford, himself, has frequently hit at Washington activities. He criticized relief measures and said that "if Santa Claus would go back to bed" people would return to work.

He denounced taxing measures of the Administration.

Today Ford is locked in battle with the National Labor Relations Board, which holds he has not complied with provisions of the Wagner labor act. He has consistently refused to recognize the United Automobile Workers Union of the John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, and has refused to agree to unionization of his plants.



HENRY FORD.

Last year he opposed the President's court reorganization plan, saying it "gives one man too much power—more power than the Constitution defines."

Supporting Gov. Landon for the Presidency in 1936, he declared that "industry was getting pretty well out of the clutches of finance until the New Deal came."

Youth, 18, Indicted For Attacking Girl Who Fled With Him

Clay Cook, 18, former Hyattsville High School student, was indicted by the grand jury at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday for a morals offense and assault and battery on Lois Simms, 15, another student at the school.

The warrant charged the offenses were committed November 15, three months before the youthful pair were found by G-men in a wooded hideout near Purcellville, Va.

HOLC Counsel Resigns Post After Charges

the manner of the distribution of the partnership fees, I am not advised.

"As scandalous and disgraceful as this letter is, in which the HOLC solicits the legal business of millions of home owners and lawyers for an individual lawyer, I wish to point out that everyone of these letters was sent out under the frank of the corporation as legal business, with the words on the envelope, 'Penalty for private use to avoid payment of postage $300.'"

Church insisted that Postmaster General James A. Farley and Attorney General Homer Cummings faced the duty of prosecuting Russell for each violation for "each of the millions of letters distributed."

Comments on Action.

Informed of Russell's resignation last night, Church said: "That's the quickest action I ever heard of. But the whole episode illustrates that this Administration practices the very sins for which it constantly condemns business and industry."

He added dryly: "I suppose Russell and Taylor will set up their joint law firm now."

Russell, a native of Rankin County, Miss., once had 10,000 lawyers in private practice working on a fee basis, in addition to his legal staff, for the HOLC. His professional career began in Atlanta, Ga., where he was president of the local Chamber of Commerce and of a building and loan association. Called here as special counsel for the Federal Home Loan Bank, he helped draft the legislation that set up the HOLC and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

Heads Bar Group.

He was elected president of the Federal Bar Association in May, 1937, succeeding Justin Miller, associate justice, United States Court of Appeals for the District. First vice president is Robert H. Jackson, new Solicitor General of the United States.

Russell, a member of numerous lawyers' clubs and bar associations, and chairman of committee on real property financing of the real property trust and probate law section of the American Bar Association, is a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity, a Mason, and belongs to the University and Cosmos clubs here. He is married and has three children.

Taylor later issued a formal statement praising Russell's record of public service, and declaring it was "most unfortunate for the both of us" that Russell should "suffer through an innocent mistake in saying a kind word for one who had worked with him for a number of years."

"No one who knows Mr. Russell," Taylor said, "will ever doubt his good faith or the purity of his motives. There is no man who has rendered a higher or a more unselfish and outstanding service to the Government."

Hungarian Nazi, Fleeing Prison, Gets to Vienna

Vienna, April 19 (AP).—Zoltan Boszormeny, Hungarian Nazi leader, arrived here today from Budapest, fleeing from a 32-month Hungarian prison sentence. Boszormeny, with 88 others, was charged with plotting an armed insurrection for May Day, 1936.

Tax Conferees Recess 2 Days, Still at Odds

Hear Douglas Outline His Plan to Exempt Holding Companies.

Deadlocked Congressional tax conferees ordered a two-day recess yesterday after another brief conference on conflicting provisions of the Senate and House tax bills failed to break the stalemate that has persisted for a week.

"We are making absolutely no progress," said Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee. "And since we were getting nowhere, we just decided we might as well quit until Friday."

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee volunteered: "It seemed like everybody was going to be busy, so we thought it would be a good time to let the sun shine."

The conferees yesterday heard Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission outline his plan for exempting from the capital gains tax property transactions of utility holding companies forced into liquidation by the utility holding company act. Douglas' proposals are included in the Senate bill, but House managers insisted they hear his testimony. Doughton said Douglas presented "a very convincing case."

Main points in deadlock are House provisions for continuance of the undivided profits tax principle, repealed in the Senate bill, and House provisions for a graduated capital gains tax. The Senate bill provides a flat 15 per cent tax on long-term capital gains.

Resistance on both fronts stiffened a week ago when President Roosevelt wrote Harrison and Doughton a letter favoring House bill provisions, and opposing Senate changes.

Harrison has proposed several times that the House managers put the issue up to members again for an expression on Senate bill provisions, but this the House conferees have refused to do. Harrison offered to take the bill back to the Senate at any time.

To date, there has been no talk of compromise. Some leaders privately expressed the opinion that after a lapse of a few more days, compromise proposals might be tendered on both sides, in a "give and take" draft that might retain a fragment of the undivided profits tax.

Assembly Hall For D.C. Sought In Connally Bill

Audit

Hazen said, "we will play along with them and furnish the land. I have no idea of refusing the auditorium offer, even though I may not agree with the selected site."

Commissioner Allen refused to comment on the auditorium location, but said there was a definite need for a large public meeting place in Washington.

Engineering Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, who returned yesterday from a vacation, stated "an auditorium is one of the great needs for the District. The location should be near the downtown hotels."

He refused to comment further until a meeting with the Board of Commissioners which is scheduled for this morning.

Need for a public indoor gathering place in Washington was emphasized to President Roosevelt and the thousands who were drenched in a downpour on the Capitol plaza at his second inaugural.

Almost immediately the late Senator Robinson (Democrat), of Arkansas, introduced a resolution creating the auditorium commission to study the problem of providing the city with a suitable place of public assembly and to submit a plan.

The plans were outlined yesterday at a conference at the Interior Department of members of the commission, representatives of the District Government and the Park and Planning Commission.

Under necessary legislation to launch the project, a new five-man commission will be apointed to manage auditorium affairs.

The proposed hall will seat 15,000 to 16,000 persons, with additional rooms to provide accommodations for nearly 40,000 it was announced. Both Federal and local activities will be held in the new auditorium—concerts, operas, conventions and sporting events. It is planned to install a refrigerating unit for air conditioning in the summer and for the manufacture of ice for skating in the winter.

The proposed building was described as a "national multiple use auditorium" with accommodations for Federal and non-Federal activities—symphony concerts, operas, conventions and sports events. The commission recommended that sports be included "only as a secondary feature and not at all if they compete or conflict in any way with the more important functions of a national character."

"In addition to the main auditorium," the report declared, "additional seating should be provided in conference rooms, exhibition halls and other rooms . . . Approximately 95,000 square feet of exhibition space should be provided to accommodate the needs of governmental and nongovernmental agencies using the auditorium. Modern auditoria have been designed to include a music hall, acoustically perfect so as to be completely satisfactory for opera and symphony concerts and to seat 3,000 persons."

Attending the conference were Secretary Ickes, the commission chairman; Senator Connally and Representative J. Will Taylor (Republican), of Tennessee, members of the commission; C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks; John Nolen, jr., director of planning of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and Capt. Hoel S. Bishop, jr., assistant District Engineer Commissioner. Other members of the commission were Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas.

One difference between this year and last year is that in 1938 Garner is telling the President things he told only to his cronies in 1937.

• • • • •

Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Jr. . . . no relation.

Secretary Wallace gave the blindfold test on an American ham and a Polish ham to a group of gourmets the other evening . . . The American ham won for flavor, 16 to 7 . . . Always the scientific approach.

A cut-up from the State Department spotted a member of the German Embassy at the next table at a night club last week. Winking at his friends, he announced in a loud voice that Lehman, of New York, and Horner, of Illinois (both non-Aryans), were certain to be the next President and Vice President . . . Enjoyed it hugely, too.

"—Wallace tests the hams."

More Abundant Life Dept.: On the same day the 25-cents-an-hour "floor for wages" was announced on the Hill, Mayor LaGuardia's frugal village announced a $2-an-hour "floor" for plumbers on New York City projects.

That's $16 a day against $10 a week.

"We've both been in Washington for years," said the diplomat's wife at a party, "and I've never met you before, Senator."

"Well," said the Senator, "better take a good quick look now; I'm up for re-election this year."

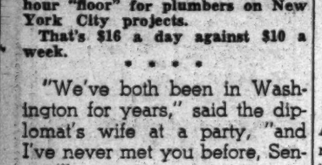
• • • •

Brilliant and delicate example of left-wing dialectics: Harold Laski, the English Laborite, was gently chiding Earl Browder, the American Communist, for his mistaken tactics.

"We are both doing Karl Marx's work," said Laski, "you in your way, I in his."

• • • •

OF THEE I SING: Of the Latin diplomat who went roller skating after dark in the ritzy diplomatic sector . . . Of the New Deal epithet, "plutogogue," which I can't find in the dictio[illegible]ry which is a high-toned way of calling a man an economic royalist . . . Of Senator Pat Harrison and Representative John O'Connor, both beaten for majority leadership and both full of revenge these days; thorns in the President's side. (O'Connor lunched alone in a crowded House dining room the day after he beat the reorganization bill.)



"—brags of 1937 and 1938."

An astute Washingtonian who has held high office under several Presidents was charting the primrose path which leads to the downfall of Chief Executives.

"They begin by taking credit for all good ideas," he said, over the first planter's punch of the warm weather season, "and blaming their advisers for the bad ones that don't work. They end up by distrusting all advisers and refusing to take any advice at all."

Then he sighed a little.

• • • •

When a Democrat wanted to brag in a Washington cocktail lounge last year, he would say in a very audible voice:

"And the President said to me——"

But in 1938 he announces loudly:

"So I told the President——"

• • • •

GILT OFF THE DOME: A veteran Representative advised a young colleague that it's silly to be in a lather about adjournment to hurry home for the primaries. "Let 'em think you've got to stay here and save the country," he said, "and haven't time to bandy politics with your opponent. You'll win . . ." Mrs. Corcoran Thom, jr., the society matron, is no relation of Brain Truster Tommy Corcoran; they've probably never met . . . If Congress dares to crow about beating the reorganization bill it may confirm the impression that Congress laid an egg. Which reminds me that the White House grounds appeared well fertilized with egg yolks this morning in the wake of the tots.

40 Girls in House Assail Privilege Tax on Business

Washington businessmen found a champion yesterday in 40 comely girls who occupied the House District Committee room for a while to consider problems of the District government.

The girls, who constituted the Junior Girls Nation, auxiliary of the District Department of the American Legion, solemnly declared the business privilege tax should not be renewed because Washington businessmen are paying enough taxes already.

After an examination of the pending District revenue bill and a perusal of the House sub-committee hearings, they discussed the taxes but suggested no alternative to the business levy.

Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, in a brief talk, said:

A Few Early Birds Volunteer for Addresses, of Course, but They Can't Be Heard Amid African Golf Games.

Sandwiched between beer and African golf, the Early Birds last night served themselves a slice of hilarity, cut thick, at what they called a banquet at the Willard Hotel.

They called it a banquet, even though the speaker failed to appear and volunteer speakers could not be heard anyway. There were pitched battles among the officers which the members sat back and enjoyed, along with the beer, until they joined in and pitched language and napkins.

Take the no-decision bout, for instance, between A. C. Mellichampe, their secretary, and his constituents. It started when President Leo May asked everybody to keep quiet and indulge in one "serious moment" while Mellichampe read the minutes.

A Loud Time.

Mellichampe reached for the microphone. So did two other people. When Mellichampe won and started reading, half the members hammered on crockery, the other half called on the secretary to speak louder, and Mays whammed away on a frying pan with his gavel, until Mellichampe snatched the gavel and threw it away. That didn't do any good because someone had turned off the mike, but Mellichampe read on with gestures until he wound up on a chair buried under a barrage of napkins. Then he went off in a corner and read the minutes to himself, which seemed to please everybody.

With Mellichampe out of danger, the president called on Bill Werber, Athletics third baseman, for a speech. This he began among a chorus of "The Old Gray Mare" with a story about oysters. They were very good oysters.

"The first oyster said . . . ," he began, and the microphone went dead. So Werber introduced four of his teammates. These gentlemen were Bob Johnson, leftfielder; Chubby Dean, pitcher; Wally Moses, rightfielder, and Charley Berry, catcher.

Speaker Stays Away.

President May took this opportunity to reach under the table and pull out eight prizes for something, which he gave away. Five of them, baseballs autographed by all members of the Athletics, were won by Arthur Strunk, J. H. Kehoe, Clyde Kellogg, Thomas W. Brahaney and L. A. Coons. A bottle of wine went to Julius O'Brien, a plant to Albert W. Howard, and a quart of whisky to Leonard May, the president's son.

"I'll see you after dinner," said the president.

Col. Clarence Chamberlain, scheduled speaker, never did show up, so the 150 members and guests snared the last salted almonds and went across the ballroom for bridge and the aforesaid African golf.

Two Art Students Win Air Excursions In Poster Contests

First prize, a trip to New York over Eastern Air Lines, was awarded by Richard Kimball, of E. A. L., to Miss Anne Strickland, student in the Livingston Art School. Her design will be copied on the 16-foot billboard in the park opposite the Commerce Building on Pennsylvania avenue.

Other prizes were: First honorable mention, an airplane trip to New York, Charles Colliflower, Abbott Art School; first prize in intermediate age group, a water color set from George F. Muth & Co., to Miss Lillian Bess, 16, Abbott Art School; first prize in junior age group, a water color set from Muth's to Edith Farthing, 15, of Payne Playground.

Woman Attacked With Knife, Robbed In University Park

Detectives last night were cruising the American University Park and Chevy Chase sections searching for the masked bandit, apparently demented, who attacked and robbed Miss Alice Quinn, 21-year-old governess Monday night.

Miss Quinn, governess for the 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Lank, 3276 Arcadia place northwest, was attacked and robbed of $4 by the masked man while she was walking toward the Lank home. She was cut on the fingers and hand when she grabbed her assailant's knife.

High Tariffs Held Dictator Makers

But for the high tariff policies of the United States in the late 1920's and the early 1930's, Adolf Hitler might be a nonentity on the world scene, Dr. Edward Lynch, of the faculty of Princeton University, told 300 delegates to the Catholic Association for International Peace yesterday.

America's international trade and financial policies in the Coolidge and Hoover regimes are, to a "very considerable extent," responsible for the events which have led to extreme nationalism and dictatorships, Dr. Lynch said.

Charles F. G. Fenwick, of the faculty of Bryn Mawr College, Pa., was re-elected president of the association.

Other officers included the Rev. Edwin V. O'Hara, honorary president; the Rev. John La Farge, of New York; Edward Skillen, of New ork; Dr. Jerome Kerwin, of the University of Chicago; Marie Carroll, of the World Peace Foundation, vice president; Miriam T. Rooney, treasurer, and Miss Elizabeth Sweeney, secretary.

Dinner Plans Completed.

Final arrangements for the silver jubilee banquet will be made by the District Association of Workers for the Blind at 7:45 p. m. tomorrow at the Epiphany Parish Hall.

Sight Saved With Needle, Doctor Says

Successful in Half of 327 Cases, He Informs G. W. Class.

Heartening results in electrical needle surgery for retinal detachment, which causes much blindness, were told here yesterday by Dr. J. H. Dunnington, New York, ophthalmologist.

In a lecture to the post-graduate class at George Washington University school of medicine, Dr. Dunnington credited the delicate operation with saving the sight of more than half of the 317 persons treated by his associates and himself.

Near-sighted people seem to be most susceptible to retinal detachment, though it may come about as a result of a blow or some other eye injury. It occurs more commonly among the old than the young.

Retina Gets Loose.

The condition itself is the separation of the retina, image screen of the eye, from the eyeball. Formerly the so-called guist operation was performed in an effort to save the sight. It took upward of two hours and was a strain upon the patient.

The new surgery described by Dr. Dunnington involves only 45 minutes to an hour on the operating table and is much safer. Minute punctures are made in the eye's tissue, resulting in the exudation of a sticky substance which literally seals the retina back into place.

Dr. Dunnington told the class the operation was most successful among younger patients, although a percentage of cures may be expected in the older ones.

Benzedrine Used.

Dr. S. Judd Beach, of the Maine Eye and Ear Infirmary, described the advantages of benzedrine drops in eye examinations. Used in conjunction with atropine or homatropine, rather than in their stead, the chemical causes far- less inconvenience to the patient undergoing tests in preparation for glasses, Dr. Beach said.

Eye damage rising out of high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries was discussed by Dr. Arthur J. Bedell, of Albany County (N. Y.) Hospital.

200 Post Carriers To See Exposition

Two hundred Post carrier boys will be the guests Saturday of Johnny J. Jones, jr., at the Johnny J. Jones Exposition shows at Twenty-first and C streets northeast.

Institute Told It's Impossible To Stop Crime

Columbia Professor Says Certain Amount Is Inevitable.

Eradication of crime in modern civilization is impossible, Prof. K. N. Llewellyn, of Columbia University, told the Institute of Criminal Science at its meeting in the Friends Meeting House last night.

He added that certain forms of criminal activity were beneficial to the progress of mankind.

"It is impossible to eradicate crime totally," said Dr. Llewellyn. "A certain amount of crime is inevitable to the accomplishment of certain activities, and wherever mankind flourishes you will find crime in many and varied forms."

Dr. Llewellyn would not specify the types of crime he thought were beneficial to mankind. Instead he insisted his audience decide this classification. However, he intimated that what legally was criminal in colonial times made possible the American Revolution.

Dr. Llewellyn was careful to point out that the crimes to which he referred were not crimes of violence or dishonesty. They were, he intimated, more or less technical violations of the law.

Falls Church High School Lad Now in New York Meeting Experts.

There'll be no job as counseler at a boys' camp this summer for 15-year-old Philip Hevenor, of Falls Church, if he can help it, because Philip, a strapping Falls Church high school sophomore, yesterday became a recognized expert in the designing of dresses for women.

Five costumes made from his sketches will be shown at a fashionable Fifth avenue shop, the Associated Press reported from New York, where Philip went with his mother to meet Sara Pennoyer, fashion expert, to whom he sent one of his designs, after reading her book, "Polly Tucker, Merchant."

Miss Pennoyer bought the design Philip sent her and ordered four more. So, instead of spending vacation outdoors in the sunshine, riding, swimming and playing boys' games, as he used to, Philip intends this summer to study art.

Philip, weighing 150 pounds and nearly 6 feet tall, developed his art naturally, without formal instruction. Though he's always been an athletic sort—on a horse and in the water he's an expert—his talent for sketching and an understanding of the styling of dresses was demonstrated as early as the age of 7.

He used dolls then, draping odd bits of dress material about them. At this point and somewhat later, Philip encountered the disapproval of his father, H. P. Hevenor, a Government engineer. But the elder Hevenor ultimately was won over and now Philip has the proud backing of both parents.

Philip studies newspaper advertisements for ideas, eliminates the original design and evolves one of his own. He thinks the Frenchman, Schiaparelli, is the best of the profession.

Bees Escape Thief and Fly Back To Warm Boiler Room Home

Don't ask Charles W. Barnsley, engineer at American University, why anybody would want to steal two hives of very active and bellicose bees. He knows only that somebody would and did, because the bees disappeared Monday night, hives and all.

Yesterday "a couple of gallons" of bees returned to the boiler room at American U. where he had kept them warm and happy until Monday night's theft.

"I've got to find them a queen," he mourned. "They won't do anything unless I get them a queen. I'll try to get one tomorrow and then they'll go back to work and be happy again."

Absently he massaged the spots where the bees had registered their delight at being home in the only way they could, poor little things.

This theft of the bees apparently took place between 7 p. m. and 9 p. m. Monday. They were seen by the night engineer when he went out to dinner at 7 and they were gone when he locked up at 9.

In case the rest of the flock, or whatever it is with bees, does not come on home, Barnsley has resorted to guile.

"I put out some sugar for bait," he said. "If they come after that tomorrow, I can follow them and see where they go."

Girl Cyclist, 14, Saved After Fall in Tidal Basin

Eunice Teel, 14, of 4412 Third street northwest, was rescued last night after she fell from a bicycle and rolled into the Tidal Basin, striking her head on the stone retaining wall.

She was pulled to safety by Park Policeman Arthur D. Jenkins, who sent her to Emergency Hospital. She was treated there for immersion and cuts on the head and sent home.

An Adams Asks S. A. R. to Back Social Reform

100 Shocked Colleagues Table Revlot at 'Red Baiting.'

To the shocked surprise of 100 colleagues, an embattled Son of the American Revolution last night urged that the local society approve Federal wage-hour legislation, a "yardstick" for all major industries, guarantees of employment and, if necessary, Constitutional amendments to make his proposals effective.

Member of the society's board of management and chairman of its committee on American institutions, the lone revolutionary was Harbert L. Adams, who has belonged to the organization for several years. He prefaced his resolutions with an attack on "great corporations, trusts, holding companies and watered stock." The speech was delivered at the annual meeting of the society at the Raleigh.

Hardly had Adams finished when his startled audience effectively buried the resolutions by unanimously referring them to the board of management with the provision that they be reported on at the next annual meeting.

Colleague Interrupts.

In his speech—which contained such sentences as, "England's tax that caused the Revolutionary War was not a drop in the bucket compared to the way we are taxed now by the trusts and combinations in restraint of trade"—Adams was interrupted once by an irate member who declared he was out of order. He continued speaking, however.

Adams, who is an inventor, told reporters later that he threw his bombshell into the meeting "because I'm so tired of hearing them talk on communism. They're always trying to link communism with the Goernment."

Immediately before Adams spoke, Maj. Gen Amos A. Fries delivered an attack on communism in general and on lax immigration laws, sit-down strikes and the ideas of Prof. Harold J. Laski in particular.

Roosevelt Defended.

Principal speech of the meeting was delivered by Col. O. R. McGuire, counsel of the General Accounting Office, who asserted that conflict between Congress and the President over extent of his powers was "at least 100 years old." Referring to President Roosevelt's recent declaration that he did not wish to be a dictator, McGuire said:

"While not intending to discuss partisan politics, I would remind you that Washington was accused of wanting to become king or a despot."

3 Civic Units Vote to Seek D. C. Suffrage

Bennings Body Protests Having to Ballot in Colored School.

Petworth Grants $10 to Aid Association in Referendum.

Interest in the forthcoming District suffrage vote last night highlighted meetings of four citizens groups, producing one $10 grant to help the District Suffrage Association, and one plan to "go out and get the neighbors to vote for suffrage."

The appropriation was voted by the Petworth Citizens Association, meeting in the Petworth school, following earlier indorsement of both local and national suffrage.

A campaign to get voters of their section to the ballot boxes on April 30, was mapped by the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights at the Powell Junior High School. Burd Payne was named chairman of a committee to direct the drive.

The Barry Farms Citizens Association voted support for both local and national suffrage during a meeting at the home of their secretary, L. G. Brown, 2846 Elvans road northeast.

A protest against locating their polling place for the suffrage referendum in a colored school was voiced by members of the Benning Citizens Association. They appointed Frank Jones, their president, James N. Keyser, and O. C. Spitzer to carry the protest to a mass meeting of the District Suffrage Association, to be held Friday at 8 p. m. at Central High School auditorium.

Plans for the latter meeting, outlined by Wilbur Finch, chairman of the Citizens Conference on District Suffrage, include reports from William A. Roberts, chairman of the resolutions committee; William H. Mondell, chairman of the elections committee, and Finch, who heads the campaign council. Other speakers will be Mrs. Clara Wright Smith and Charles A. Franklin, secretary of the campaign council.

Teigan Backs Suffrage

Representative Henry G. Teigan (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, told delegates to the Citizens' Committee on Fair Taxation at a meeting in the District Building last night that "if you want to get anywhere, you people will have to be militant; you will have to let them know on the Hill that you know business."

Saying local problems, including that of taxation, will never be solved until the District has self-government and national representation, Teigan declared himself against the business privilege tax but in favor of the income tax.

Merlo Pusey, editorial writer on The Post, another speaker, said he believed House voting on the appropriation bill was influenced not by the needs of the District but by the representatives' private worries about their next election.

Heath, Librarian, Is Found Dead in Rock Creek Park

Howard Vinson Heath, 45, librarian at the reading desk of the Library of Congress, was found dead last night under a tree in Rock Creek Park near the Q street bridge. He had been missing from his home at 1321 Twenty-first street northwest since Monday night.

In Address Before Greater New York Safety Council

By the United Press.

New York, April 19.—W. A. Van Duzer, traffic engineer, did some crystal gazing tonight and said he saw motorists of the future prevented from passing red lights by photo-electric cells which would stop their automobiles at intersections.

He also saw radio energy as a substitute for gasoline and express highways equipped with railroad-like block signals.

Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic of Washington, told the Greater New York Safety Council at its ninth annual convention that some of his visions might come true within as few as 5 years and in 25 years be as common-place as radio.

"I think the time will come," he said, "When motor vehicles will be equipped with some kind of sharp skegs or blades that may be depressed instantly so as to come in contact with the pavement in such a manner as to eliminate vicious skids . . .

"I believe it is possible by the use of photo-electric cells to prevent motor vehicles from running through red lights or stop signs. It may also be possible to control the speed, to co-ordinate the movement of vehicles on a street where the traffic lights are arranged for progressive control, and to warn drivers when they cross or get too close to the center line on hill crests.

"I agree with Dr. Miller McClintock's suggestion that it may be possible to install a two-way automatic radio in every car to sound warning signals at road intersections, and automatic lighting controlled by photo-electric cells to illuminate only those sections of road actually in use."

He predicted the rear-end engine to give drivers greater visibility and the three-wheeled automobile to permit turns at 90 degrees and easy parking.

Exhaustion of petroleum, he predicted, will make it impossible for the average person to own an automobile and so he visualizes "the possibility of vehicles operating upon our streets and highways with electric motors, the energy for which will be transmitted by ethereal waves."

The mechanics of paying for this energy," he continued, "would be very simple as undoubtedly meters would be licensed by a central agency and metered so that the electricity will be paid for by the same method that we pay for house current. In other words, the time will undoubtedly come when motor vehicles upon our streets and highways will be operated indirectly by water power."

Jackie Coogan Is Most Beset Of All Juveniles

Other Hollywood Youngsters Have Earnings Protected in Trust Funds.

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Staff Writer.

Hollywood, April 19.—Jackie Coogan probably would have been better off had he never seen the working end of the movie camera, which made him the greatest child star of his day and enabled him to earn $4,000,000 while he still was in knee pants.

His phenomenal career ended by the time his voice began to change. All of his efforts to gain theatrical employment after he attained manhood fizzled—and his final blow came when his mother and stepfather refused to share with him the fortune he had earned.

His hair is growing thin even though he's only 23 years old. There is no place for him permanently in Hollywood. His education has been sporadic and he has no training for any but an acting career.

Will Profit by Suit.

Coogan undoubtedly will garner a few thousands of publicity dollars as result of his suit. Universal Studios has offered him a part in one picture, capitalizing on his tangled affairs, while several stage impresarios have started negotiations for him to make a personal appearance tour after the trial. Two newspaper feature syndicates also have offered him money for writing the story of his life.

If he fails to collect the money he earned at the rate of $4,000 a week while other boys his age were playing, Jackie's prospects otherwise are nil.

Shirley Temple's money, for instance, is being invested in trust funds and annuities payable to her at intervals until she is 50 years old. Her mother said there was no chance that 9-year-old Shirley would come of age a pauper.

Other Youngsters Safeguarded.

Jane Withers likewise is heading toward wealthy womanhood. Her parents are depositing $1,000 a week in a trust fund payable to her when she is of age. Jane also has a banking account now and signs all the checks written in her behalf.

Jackie Cooper, now nearly 16 years old and making a comeback in the films after a childhood almost paralleling Coogan's, also is putting his money into a trust fund for himself—and having a big time with perhaps the fanciest tin lizzie in Hollywood.

Mickey Rooney's money similarly is tied up in trusts made out to him personally. So is Deanna Durbin's.

Freddie Bartholomew, the 13-year-old Britisher, however, has been beset with assorted lawsuits almost since he became a picture star. He reported in his latest court action that his expenses, attorney's fees, agent's commissions and taxes were so high that he no longer could afford to support his parents in London.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Her Jungle Love' Adds Prestige to Technicolor As Aid to Realistic and Beautiful Cinematic Effects

Dorothy Lamour Still Wears a Sarong for Edification of Ray Milland and Lynne Overman in Romance of Tropics; a Word of Ann Andrews; Abbey Theater Players on Way to Capital; Nugent-Dietz Sparring Match; Sherman Now Character Actor; Notes.

SOMETIME, probably, Miss Dorothy Lamour will appear on the screen in a dress. That time, however, has not as yet arrived.

In "Her Jungle Love," previewed by the guys and gals of the drama desks yesterday afternoon, Miss Lamour still is scantily draped in a sarong that emphasizes her right to be known as the pre-eminent exponent of the screen's present penchant for picturized love under tropical suns.

BELL.

"Her Jungle Love" is executed entirely in Technicolor and is one of the most impressive demonstrations yet seen of the potentialities of natural color photography in the matter of realistic and extremely beautiful effects.

The story revealed in this bizarre Malayan tale is not always of sufficient dramatic substance to justify the obvious extravagance that has gone into its production. It gets a little shaky at times in an evident attempt to carry conviction to sophisticated audiences.

There is a faint suggestion of "Ebb Tide" in much of the action of this Paramount release and toward the end, considerably more of that ill-judged production of H. Rider Haggard's fantastic yarn of "She," in which Helen Gahagan was starred on the screen.

There is some sort of terrestrial disturbance to mark the climax of the picture that tumbles mountains upon those most worthy of extinction and leaves completely immune to catastrophe those whose virtues warrant their survival. It is all very spectacular, mildly terrifying and wholly unbelievable.

Miss Lamour, nevertheless, is an exceedingly enticing figure, in her skimpy sarong; Ray Milland is a handsome lover and Lynne Overman, former Washington stock player, a comedian who does much to salvage the piece on the side of wisecracking amusement. J. Carrol Naish is cast as one of the most despicable villains I ever have seen on the silver sheet—a British-educated savage who went in for black magic and hypnotism and didn't wait until he got to the crossroads to do his dirty work!

But the best actors in the film are the late Jiggs, the chimpanzee, and a little lion cub—or was it a tiger cub?—that practically will "steal the show" in the view of all animal lovers.

These two fellows even outrank Miss Lamour's sarong—and that to all intents and purposes is the ultima thule of outranking!

• • • •

The appearance of Jiggs in "Her Jungle Love" recalls the visit once paid to this office by a juvenile understudy of the same Simian star that had appeared in a Johnny Weissmuller "Tarzan" film and made the call in company with a 14-foot boa constrictor that had dangled from a jungle tree in the same picture. On this occasion, I was subjected to much the same sort of monkeyshines as those to which Lynne Overman is compelled to submit in the Lamour vehicle. The little codger climbed up my leg into my lap, got both hairy arms around my neck and was affectionate no end. That was the time I fell in love! Mr. Overman seems to have had a little more sales resistance. But it is notorious that this column is a "sucker" for animals of any breed, so that accounts for that. The boa constrictor didn't do quite so well. He was a gorgeous thing to look at, but somehow seemed to lack the quality of personal warmth!

• • • •

One of the inexplicable lapses of a harried midnight scrivener attempting to write a review in a total typewriter time of 35 minutes is that he should omit from the resume of so important and beautifully done an operetta as "Three Waltzes," current at the National, any mention of so important a member of the cast as Ann Andrews, who plays the role of the Baroness Delaunay and plays it so splendidly.

There is no excuse for this sort of thing, beyond a sort of mental aberration that probably eventually will lead to the insane asylum. Miss Andrews' baroness is one of the highlights of the evening—or matinee, if that is when you are going—and should have been celebrated as such in yesterday morning's observations.

This is being written in no spirit of apology to Miss Andrews. She needs no apology. The one to whom I am apologizing is this column's prize dumb-Bell! I hope you don't know the guy I mean.

• • • •

And while we are on the subject, there was another minor defect in yesterday's review in a line which said something about "six rousing curtain calls, a remarkable tribute to an offering of this character, for which there is an ample measure of approval." The "there," of course, should have been "three." (Note to the compositor: I sometimes hit the wrong key myself—and don't say, "Whadda ya mean, 'sometimes!'")

• • • •

The Abbey Theater Players, from Dublin, Ireland, probably the foremost acting group appearing in the contemporary theater, actually are headed for Washington, just as has been hoped all season.

Yesterday afternoon an emissary of the company dropped by the desk to make assurance doubly sure. They are out in the Midwest now, but are wending their way East from the Pacific Coast and will reach the stage of the National Theater in overdue course.

There may be some surprising announcements in connection with this engagement later on—both as to personnel of the company and possible playing dates.

But that, as I say, will come later on.

• • • •

The boys in New York are fanning the air again. In last Sabbath's theatrical department of the New York Times, Frank S. Nugent, picture critic, and Howard Dietz, director of publicity for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, took a little batting practice that seemed to me to get them both nowhere with amazing speed. Mr. Nugent's contention, of course, is that heavy money expenditure has nothing to do with the intrinsic merit of cinema productions upon which the vast sums are expended; Mr. Dietz's that Hollywood is not "shooting at the moon," but earnestly attempting to maintain the West Coast as the capital of the film industry by adventurous planning as well as prodigious monetary investment. Neither one of them is always right—as who of us is? But there is virtue in their battle, at that, from the standpoint of another remote observer who struggles with the same problem, seven days a week and 50 weeks a year. Their merry exchange of epistles consumed almost four columns of newspaper space. And what a godsend that is at this time of year!

Vinnie Phillips, in case you didn't turn the corner back there, who played Sister Bessie, the evangelist, when "Tobacco Road" was seen here last season, now has the same role in the Broadway production of the play. Not that it matters.

You will have a tough time trying to recognize Freddy Sherman when you see "Three Waltzes" at the National. This former juvenile of the National Theater Players, sponsored for more than a decade by Stephen E. Cochran, now has become a character actor and appears in various ages of senility—or thereabouts—during the progress of the operetta during three generations. He didn't get a hand on his entrance Monday night for a very valid reason. No one in the audience recognized him. But there is still some balm in Gilead. Freddy will be recognized from now as a better actor than even his most ardent old friends ever before had suspected him of being.

Periphery Note.

That "can-can" scene in "Three Waltzes" is spanned by the "bridge of thighs." I know it's not new, but nothing else expresses it quite so well. Hip-hip, hooray!

Still Wearing That Malayan Sarong

DOROTHY LAMOUR,

star of "Her Jungle Love," coming soon to F street—and it is a Technicolor production of unexampled beauty—seems destined never to be allowed to appear before the cameras in formal, modern dress. In this subject, Miss Lamour again disports herself as a native of the tropic seas, whose only wardrobe worry is one of those inevitable sarongs. This one is a little more abbreviated than usual, but Miss Lamour is a pulchritudinous young woman who can stand that!

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., April 19.—Happy days are here again for M-G-M. For 20 years I've been looking for the picture without a flaw. "Test Pilot" is that picture.

Here you have Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy competing with the most beautiful, terrifying, useful, monstrous machines the human mind ever conceived or built. That's competition. No one acts. The humans are as real as the monsters they dominate.

HEDDA HOPPER.

There isn't a false note in the whole picture. Even those with only a line or two mean it. Wish I had space for all their names.

Thousands of words have been written about Spencer Tracy's acting. Sure, it's good. But let me tell you he took nothing away from Clark Gable or Myrna Loy—and I can think of nothing better than that to write about all three.

I can understand the big boss, Louis B. Mayer, going through the new executive building at Metro—which looks like the Grand Central Station—with arms about Producer Louis Leighton and Director Victor Fleming, and saying with a broad grin, "Take your choice of rooms." He should have said, "Take the building—fill it with writers like Frank Wead, Vincent Lawrence and Waldemar Young, and give us more pictures like "Test Pilot" and you'll have me wagging my tail and shouting like Leo the Lion."

Referring again to the idea for a Pacific theater guild, and Kate Lawson's letter—she wrote:

"By Americans, of course, I mean that magnificent mixture of all the world which is to be found working and living here. No profession is so broad and all inclusive as the theater. It's the one place where all races, creeds, arts and crafts labor together. Every language, emotion and tool must be present if it's worth living and dying for. We're all hoping for a real theater, not a school or a playtoy for bored people. But a breathing place where the lion and the lamb walk in understanding and harmony.

"Incidentally, Hedda, the cellophane opera I did was 'Four Saints In Three Acts,' not 'Three Saints and a Sinner.'"

Funny how your mind always runs to sin!

Went to a cocktail party for that charming, rich English bachelor banker, Sir Victor Sasoon. And did he go for Hedy LaMarr! Which put a few noses out of joint.

Paulette Goddard romped in with the Earl of Warwick in a red sweater and one of the biggest diamond and ruby bracelets seen hereabouts. He came in an old sweat shirt. For a minute I thought it was Jack Oakie.

Hostess Heather Thatcher was stunning in long, form-fitted black jersey, with two gold water-lily clips at her throat and her monocle—the guest of honor had one, too. Kay Johnson (Mrs. John Cromwell), such a swell actress, wore a darb of a hat—something like a big pincushion of dark blue ostrich feathers, and popping from the middle a straggling bouquet of spring flowers.

Sir Victor spent most of his time inside our studios photographing everything. Had three cameras going at once. He gave me the name of a new night club. His chauffeur took him. And I promised not to tell its name. He doesn't want it spoiled because it's a meeting place for oil drillers, drivers and workmen. A singer there so wonderful, Sasoon persuaded him to do some of his songs on records. He did, and they're now being played in South America by Sir Victor.

Harold Lloyd retains his pace as Hollywood's foremost exponent of clean, thrilling comedy in his current realease, "Professor, Beware!" which, incidentally, marks his 500th production. In early days the comedian made 52 one-reelers a year, although at present his production rate is only about one picture every 18 months.

". . . No dear, no staying home for you. I know you're tired—but it was your idea to wheel the baby in the Easter parade . . . Why did you take him into three Broadway cafes? I suppose that's the first time they ever saw a young man carried in—instead of out."

12 P. M. "Two weeks ago," a police official states at the Tavern, "you wrote that there was a mysterious reason behind Dewey's delay in prosecuting the Goldis murder trial. Now that Gurrah Shapiro has surrendered, and is being linked with that case, you can be sure that Gurrah's missing partner, Lepke Buchalter was secretly indicted for that murder weeks ago. Sealed indictments were handed down. Prominent union officials will be mentioned" . . . "I'm going to produce Schnitzler's play, 'Dr. Bernhardi,' Jed Harris reports at the Casa Manana. But I won't pay any royalties to Schnitzler's heirs, in Vienna. I'll pay no royalties to be spent in a Fascist country. If the heirs want the money, I'll deposit it—in England" . . . "C. B. S. will combat N. B. C.'s offer of $100,000 for the broadcast rights to Dick Merrill's flight to Norway," a radio executive confides at the Paradise. "C. B. 1 A. M. "Gary Cooper came to see our circus," John Ringling North declares at "21." "He was most interested in speaking to our 60 Bengal lancers. Gary asked them questions, and they were amazed at his knowledge of the lancers—until Gary told them that he had appeared in the movie, 'Lives of a Bengal Lancer'" . . . "I'm going to Italy April 22 for an engagement at La Scala," Ruth Wayne confesses at the Cotton Club. "I'm doing a command performance before Mussolli. I've got a new thing for him—'Carmen,' in Swingtime" . . . "Sally Rand," an agent informs at the Gay Nineties, "was one of the backers of 'The Merry Wives of Windsor' which opened last week and flopped" . . . At the Radio City bowling alley Fredric March is tied with Bennett Cerf and Bob Sherwood. The duo whispers to standees that March will sign his autograph—just before the star bowls. But the plot is foiled, March signs the autographs and then calmly proceeds to bowl—two perfect strikes.

Kiel, president of the St. Louis Municipal Opera, listen to Willie and Eugene Howard's "Rigoletto" travesty at the Versailles. "Nevertheless," they tell the Howards, "our own opera plans are unchanged. We're going to Washington to invite the President to the opening of our opera season in June" . . . "A $2,500 offer of settlement was made in the Eddie Brandt alienation of affections suit against Herbert Marshall," an attorney assures at the Cavalier. "It was turned down."

3 A. M. "Last week," a reporter states at Bill Bertollotti's, "the newspapers reported that several Americans fighting for the loyalists escaped from a Fascist jail, swam the icy Ebro River and escaped to France. One of them swam the river first—with a bullet in his hip—and then returned to convince his pals that it was safe. His name is Fred Keller. Keller was an elevator boy in the building where the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Battalion have their offices here. He didn't become interested in Spain—until the Friends moved into the building" . . . "I can't understand it," Proprietor Dmitri sighs at El Gaucho. "This man keeps coming here just to play backgammon with me and I give him lessons. His name is Ely Culbertson" . . . "Looka this check—for 3 ponds sixpence," Jimmy Durante protests at the 18 Club. "It's for the British rights to my song, 'Inka Dinka.' Dem English don't recognize a masterpiece."

4 A. M. "This is straight," a Washington official assures at El Morocco, "The New Deal's antitrust drive will be renewed this week" . . . "You bore me," Oscar Levant's companion tells the composer. "Well," he comforts the lady, "this is a year of upsets" . . . "When Sylvia Sidney returned from Hollywood," a realtor informs at the Village Brewery, "she rented the former Pulitzer mansion. She was shown a three-story chamber, around which ran a huge balcony linked to six other rooms. 'Well,' Sylvia sighed, contentedly, 'this is perfect. I always wanted a little room of my own'" . . . "The two British prize fighters squared off," Broderick Crawford relates at the Onyx Club. "One of them hooked a left under the other's guard and socked his stomach. The other one grunted, said, 'That does it, th'nk y'u'—and walked out of the ring."

5 A. M. Paul V. Carroll, author of the hit, "Shadow and Substance," refuses to check his hat and coat at Reuben's, orders a cup of tea, and confesses: "I'm returning home on the 22d. I'm traveling tourist class, not cabin. When I was told the difference in price I realized I'm a true Scotchman" . . . "Ella Kazan," reports Harold Clurman, director of the Group Theater's "Golden Boy," at Lindy's "play the fighter's tough manager in our show. Well, the tough manager is sporting a mysterious blinker."

"We had a scavenger hunt at our Mamoroneck home today," Neal Andrews reports at Dave's. "My wife, Dorothy Hall, and George Jean Nathan, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Tracy and a lot of others were here. One of the items to be secured was Tommy Manville's 'Beware of the Dog' sign. I had to call up Tommy first and warn him not to fire any buckshot at the trespassers. The second item was a real tough one—a summons. Two of the guests got summonses quickly. They hopped into their cars to rush to a lawyer's office to get 'em there. A cop stopped 'em, and gave them summonses—for speeding!"

6 A. M. "... and why do you whistle so early in the morning, dear? ... Why? ... You want George to love music? ... Don't worry. He'll grow up to be a musician all right. Like Toscanini, eh? ... Well, he'll probably want to grow up to be a musician—just to marry some one like Garbo."

Louise Hovick to Sing in New Film

Still another vocalist has been discovered at 20th Century-Fox. First the splendid voice of Simone Simon was brought to light, then the fact that Tony Martin has a voice of grand opera caliber.

Now Louise Hovick, former Broadway comedienne, will have her chance to sing on the screen. As a part of her portrayal of the role of a Broadway entertainer in "Battle of Broadway," which features Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy, herself and others, Miss Hovick sings "The Daughter of Mademoiselle."

Giants Rout Bees, 13 to 1, Batting Hard

Score 4 Runs in First, Chase MacFayden From Box Early.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—The New York Giants, exploiting new-found power as well as all-around efficiency, opened fire today in defense of the National League baseball championship with a blast that flattened the Boston Bees, 13 to 1, for the benefit of a jubilant opening day crowd of 39,742 spectators.

Returning to the Polo Grounds for the first time since they took it on the chin from the Yankees last October, Bill Terry's machine steamrollered the Bostons without serious opposition, while lanky Cliff Melton took nearly all the sting out of the Bees' attack. The sophomore southpaw lost a shutout when Vince DiMaggio, brother of the Yankee holdout, belted a home run into the upper deck in the seventh.

The Giants fell upon bespectacled Danny MacFayden with such ferocity that he yielded four runs and failed to last the first inning. Dick Bartell started the fireworks with a homer into the leftfield stands. Mel Ott's three-run homer in the second helped roll up the count at the expense of Bill Weir, young southpaw. John Lanning, third and last Boston flinger, was the victim of a four-run rally in the eighth, aided by DiMaggio's two-base muff of Ott's high fly.

Ott was the clean-up star, driving in four runs with his homer and a double. Bartell and Long John McCarthy, who also hit for the circuit in the third, each contributed three blows to the 16-hit onslaught.

Mayor LaGuardia took the box to toss the first pitch, after the flag-raising ceremonies, while those two old Yankee cronies, Col. Jacob Ruppert and Babe Ruth, had a pregame reunion.

Browns Trip Indians, 6-2

Allen Victim as St. Louis Takes Opener.

Cleveland, April 19 (AP).—Cleveland's Indians got the hits in their opener today but the revived St. Louis Browns got the runs and sent Johnny Allen down to a 6-2 defeat.

The Browns' 4-run barrage in the fifth, in which Hal Trosky, aided with a 2-run error, meant defeat for the flashy right-hander who won 15 consecutive starts last season before losing his last attempt of the year.

Homer Beats Cards, 4 to 3

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 19.—As the opening day crowd was moving toward the exits feeling the St. Louis Cardinals had come from behind to win, Arky Vaughan stepped up in the ninth and hit to the roof of the rightfield pavilion for a home run with one on to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 4-to-3 victory here today.

The official attendance was 19,865.

The Cardinals bunched a series of hits with an error to pull out in front, 3 to 2, in the fifth after Paul Waner scored two runs for the Pirates in the first and third frames.

Bob Klinger, the Pirates' third hurler, was credited with the victory. Bob Weiland, who was taken out after Vaughan's homer, yielded ten hits for the loss.

Joe Medwick, the Cards' star slugger, was on the sidelines with lumbago. It was the first game missed by Medwick since September 10, 1934. He had played 485 successive games.

Dollar Sign Raises Its Ugly Head.

By Shirley Povich.

"I have always been reluctant to inject the dollar sign into baseball," commented Philip K. Wrigley as he broke down and confessed that he paid the St. Louis Cardinals $185,000 in cash for Dizzy Dean in addition to the three players who went to the Cardinals.

POVICH

"I don't believe that the fans are interested so much in what a player costs or how much salary he draws as they are in what he delivers on the ball field," Mr. Wrigley added.

But it seems that somebody—undoubtedly Mr. Wrigley—is wrong about that, for the owner of the Cubs, who for two days refused to comment on the deal, finally decided to break a precedent and make known the amount of cash that passed. "The fans insisted," it was reported at the Cubs' office.

* * * *

The Cubs' reluctance to inject the dollar sign into baseball must be something new. Because the Chicago Club has been the prime exponent of cash transactions in the big leagues. And if, as Mr. Wrigley says, the fans are not interested in how much money passes in these deals, the United States Board of Tax Appeals is very much interested, it seems.

The dollar sign has raised its ugly head in great profusion in the baseball business of the Chicago club, according to the United States Board of Tax Appeals reports. They reveal that in 1916 when Mr. Wrigley's father, the late William Wrigley, bought the Chicago franchise in 1916, he paid $641,152.17 for the team.

Since that date, the Cubs have been setting something of a high mark in dollar dealings for playing talent. In one attempt to justify the club's expenditures for playing talent before the Tax Board, Vice President Veek of the Cubs pointed out that it was customary to pay huge sums for ball players.

* * * *

Under oath the Cubs' official made the statement on May 19, 1932, that "over in Philadelphia there is one ball player we would give more for than we would give for the Phillies' franchise and entire team of players if he were not on the team."

Veek was obviously referring to Chuck Klein, ace slugger of the Phillies, whom the Cubs eventually bought for $100,000 two years later.

The Cubs have a long and unflattering record of player purchases. In 1926 they peeled $35,000 off the bankroll for Elwood English and got a fair return on that investment. Two years later they gave up to the Braves $120,000 and four players valued at $51,000 for Rogers Hornsby, who

Yanks Split Double Bill With Bosox

Win Opener, 5 to 3; Shut Out 6 to 0 in Finale, With But 2 Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 19.—The world champion New York Yankees, although gaining a split in the Patriots' Day twin bill with the Red Sox, were humbled no end today by dropping a two-hit, 6-to-0 shutout in the second game after squeaking through a 5-to-3 decision in the first.

The combined pitching of Jackie Wilson and Southpaw Fritz Ostermueller turned the trick in the afternoon engagement, blanking every batsman except rookie Flash Gordon, who doubled in the third off Wilson, and Frankie Crosetti, who singled in the eighth off Fritz.

A crowd of 35,000 turned out for the afternoon encounter, which was featured by the Red Sox four-run splurge in the sixth frame. Three of those tallies were accounted for by Bobby Doerr's homer with two out and two on.

In the morning game, played before a 10,000 crowd, the Sox finally solved Lefty Gomez in the eighth inning, and went ahead, 3-2, with a two-run rally. But young Charley Wagner walked two batters to open the ninth and, after Johnny Marcum relieved him, Billy Knickerbocker was purposely passed, loading the bases. At this point, Rufus the Red Ruffing was called in to pinch-hit for Gomez and lined a single into right center for two runs and the ball game. Lefty Grove, who started for the Sox, was taken out for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

With today's split the Yankees showed two defeats in the three starts of their season-opening series. They dropped yesterday's opening game.

Chisox Beat Tigers, 4 to 3

'Cripples' Score 3 Runs in 4th to Win Game.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago April 19.—The long-clawed Detroit Tigers, despite two booming home runs, had their tails twisted, 4 to 3, by the scrappy Chicago White Sox today in an American League opener at Comiskey Park before 18,000 spectators.

A lone run in the second inning, backed up by a three-run splurge in the fourth, more than offset round-trip smashes by big Hank Greenberg and Chet Laabs, which came in the fifth and ninth frames with none aboard.

Johnny Whitehead was the winning pitcher, scattering nine hits hits before retiring in favor of Clint Brown when the Tigers threatened to get back into the game in the ninth. With the score 4-2 and one out in that frame, Laabs went in to pinch-hit for Pitcher George Gill and blasted a homer into the left-field stands.

Roy Cullenbine singled and was forced by Dixie Walker, who went out trying to steal second, ending the battle. Roxy Lawson, who beat Chicago five times last year, was the losing pitcher, allowing six hits and all the Sox runs in the six innings he worked.

Three hits and an error by Bill Rogell figured in the Sox three-run blast in the fourth. One of them was Joe Kuhel, obtained from Washington for Zeke Bonura, who had another safety and fielded nicely.

Three players involved in the big winter trade between the clubs saw action. Marvin Owen, former Tiger, failed to hit for the Sox but fielded brilliantly. "Gee" Walker, former Tiger, also played well on defense and had one hit in four trips. Dixie Walker, traded by Chicago to Detroit in the same deal, went hitless in four appearances at the plate.

By Shirley Povich.

Prof. Monte Weaver, who quit a job on the University of Virginia faculty to throw baseballs, threw some in the most approved style yesterday and the Nats beat the Athletics by the highly decisive score of 9 to 2.

Weaver was unrecognizable as the failure of 1935-36-37. He brought to the mound a new pitching motion which featured a half pivot that exposed his back to the hitters, and the Athletics could accumulate only six hits off his delivery.

As a result, the Nats zoomed to the top of the American League standings with their second successive victory. Six thousand fans, the largest second-day crowd of the past ten years, saw the Washington athletes win behind Weaver.

Thomas' Support Bad.

They won despite the fact that big Zeke Bonura, the opening day hero, went hitless in four appearances at the plate. But Bonura was the only Nat who did go hitless. They pummeled Luther Thomas for all of their 11 hits and all of their 9 runs before George Caster took up the pitching for Connie Mack in the seventh.

Thomas, a tall, pink-cheeked lad whom the Nats ignored at their Biloxi camp five years ago after he had acquired a pitching reputation on the Washington sandlots, was the victim of some traitorous support by the Athletics who tossed three damaging errors into the proceedings.

He was the victim also of the particular slugging of Buddy Lewis and Buddy Myer, who drove over four runs in the Nats' big sixth inning with a respective triple against the left-center wall and a two-bagger.

Despite Weaver's mastery of the Athletics, the Nats twice were forced to come from behind to win the ball game. The A's took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Mel Almada's supersensational catch of Finney's long fly to the centerfield corner—a galloping, one-hand affair—averted a batch of Philadelphia runs.

Taft Wright, who wasted a perfectly good triple in the opening inning, drove over the tying run in the third with a long fly to right that scored Almada, who had progressed to third on his own single and another by Lewis.

Johnson Puts A's Ahead.

Bob Johnson put the A's in front again in the fourth inning. He did it very simply. He worked the count to three and two against Weaver and then whacked the next pitch into the left-center seats for a home run. That made it 2-1.

But not for long. Cecil Travis opened the Nats' fourth with a double to right and Rick Ferrell scored him from third with a long fly to center. Weaver astounded the A's, the 6,000 and himself by rapping a single to center and Almada pushed him to third with another single. When Bill Werber let Finney's wild throw bound past him into the A's dugout, Weaver dashed home and Almada raced to second.

Then smart coaching at third-base brought the Nats their third run of the inning. Shortstop Russ Peters booted Lewis' grounder and Almada dashed to third. When Peters showed no disposition to pick up the ball which lay at his feet, Coach Clyde Milan waved Almada home and he scored on the play.

But the chief festivities were reserved for the sixth inning which Rick Ferrell opened with a double against the centerfield wall. Thomas hit Almada to put two on base and at this point Buddy Lewis took 'em off with a lusty triple to left center. Wright produced a long fly that scored Lewis from third and then Wayne Ambler, Peters' successor at shortstop, muffed Zeke Bonura's tame grounder. It unsettled Thomas. He filled the bases with passes and Buddy Myer emptied 'em of two occupants with a long double to center.

That gave the Nats five runs for the inning and a 9-2 lead, which, you remember, was the final score.

Indians Beat Bethesda, 7-5

Tom Hutchinson, Anacostia High School's ace hurler, who made quite a name for himself in schoolboy circles as a broken-field runner last fall, pitched the Indians to their first baseball win of the season yesterday as Bethesda-Chevy Chase bowed, 7-5, on the diamond at Garrett Park.

Hutchinson fanned seven and by only walking two men showed that it was not difficult for him to find the plate. After allowing three runs in the second, Tom settled down to pitch scoreless ball until the eighth. Meanwhile, his mates had slugged across enough runs to win.

Robert Solbach and Robert Gordon were the big guns in driving across the two runs scored in the fifth and se

Foxcatchers' Ace Shows Great Speed

Havre De Grace, Md., April 19.—"Look out, Kentucky Derby! Here I Come!" That's the message the Foxcatcher Farm's Dauber wrote with his flying hooves in the stretch here this afternoon. Allowed to display his speed unmolested by tight reins for a little more than a sixteenth of a mile, the Pennant colt appeared to have been shot out of a gun, so easy did he dispose of his opposition. While he finished only a length and a half in advance of the Denemark Stable's Blind Eagle, Dauber was an easy winner. Third in the vest-pocket field of five was Bunny Baby. In the "out-of-the-money column" went Crepe and Chaps, a pair of Derby hopes.

The crowd of 10,000 had plenty of respect for the colt that Willie du Pont paid $29,000 for at the C. V. Whitney dispersal sale last autumn at Pimlico. They played him until the track was forced to get extra-number tickets. Those who collected the $3.50 mutuel believed that they had stolen money.

It was over a slow, holding track that Dauber performed in a manner which overshadows anything exhibited by a Derby or Preakness candidate in Maryland this spring. He turned in the excellent time of 1:45 1-5 for the mile and 70 yards and gave evidence that there is much more speed lurking in his rounded flanks and stocky legs.

Jockey Moose Peters, who will do the saddle honors when Dauber marches postward at Louisville, come May 9, must have had instructions to make the finish look respectable.

Dauber was a contented last under a heavy grip as the five went along the backstretch. In the straightaway, going to the wire, Dauber moved up gradually but still under wraps. In midstretch, Peters turned the reins loose and the fun began. Dauber had a driving Blind Eagle out in front of him, but he seemed to be tied to the rail as the Faxcatcher star charged. Nearing the line, Peters pulled in again.

Walter Haights' Havre de Grace Racing Charts

(Compiled by Walter Haight.)
WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, SLOW.

FIRST RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:32½. Winner, H. L. Straus' b. f. (2), by Jean Valjean—Glory of the Seas II. Trained by A. Pelleteri. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:57 1-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
SEA SHELL	(E. Smith)	115	1	1	1½	1hd	1nk	$3.95
BARKER	(Young)	117	8	6	4½	4½	2½	6.00

EMMA H.	(DeCamillis)	113	2	2	6½	7½	8	32.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEA SHELL, $9.90, $4.40, $2.40; BARKER, $5.80, $4.80; TIN DEVIL, $5.80.

SEA SHELL, first away, opened a lead at once, shook off POLLY FAIR in stretch later coming wide for better going and just lasted ahead of BARKER'S rush. The latter, off slowly and forced to race very wide, was wearing down winner. TIN DEVIL broke in tangle and closed with rush when clear. WALLI followed the pace closely and faltered.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:01. Off 3:02. Winner, A. C. Compton's ch. g. (6), by Apprehension—Bantry Pass. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:16 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—APPREHEND, $4.70, $3.90, $3.40; ICY WIND, $11.00, $5.30; BROADSTEP, $7.50.

APPREHEND, allowed to settle into best stride, came around leaders gradually to take command and had speed in reserve at finish. ICY WIND, slow to break, went to front runners approaching stretch and finished with good energy. BROADSTEP was sent to front early, but tired gradually in final quarter.

Daily Double, Sea Shell and Apprehend, Paid $17.30.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:32. Off 3:37. Winner, H. L. Straus' b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BE JABBERS, $26.20, $15.60, $7.40; TOWN CAR, $5.50, $4.10; CALAMEGA, $6.20.

BE JABBERS, hustled to front, drew out to long lead and was in hand at finish. TOWN CAR was hard ridden from start and was best of others. CALAMEGA closed gamely from a slow beginning. HI-TIDE pinched back at start, went evenly. SPEAK raced on outside and tired.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:14. Winner, M. Lowenstein's blk. c. (3), by Sickle-Fib. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:17 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT INTRUDER, $10.70, $5.60, $3.60; NO ENDING, $5.30, $3.70; PETIT JEAN, $4.10.

NIGHT INTRUDER, taken under restraint while running with pace to three-quarter pole, was sent to outside for racing room and won going away. NO ENDING, in thick of contention from break, shook off WAY OUT to take command and continued willingly, but could not resist the winner. PETIT JEAN closed full of run.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:46. Off 4:48½. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's b. c. (3), by Pompey—Oroya. Trained by J. H. Stotler. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:15 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED PEPPER, $9.40, $4.80, $4.00; SPRING MEADOW, $5.30, $4.30; FAIR COMPANY, $8.70.

RED PEPPER, sent to front in run to turn, was kept out in better going, shook off ARDICATE and drew out to win easily. SPRING MEADOW, off poorly and rushed up on inside, hung in final drive. FAIR COMPANY, trailer for a quarter, closed full of run on outside.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,500. The Hampton Roads. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:21. Off 5:21½. Winner, Foxcatcher Farm's ch. c. (3), by Pennant—Ship o' War. Trained by R. E. Handlen. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45 1-5.

CHAPS	(Richards)	119	5	4	4½½	4h	5	5	5	7.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DAUBER, $3.50, $2.90, $2.40; BLIND EAGLE, $6.10, $3.20; BUNNY BABY, $3.10.

DAUBER, slow to get under way, was under strong restraint to stretch, came to outside for racing room, and rallied sharply to easily dispose of BLIND EAGLE. The latter saved ground at first turn, was close to pace of CREPE and BUNNY BABY along backstretch, swung wide entering straightway and took command, but could not resist the winner. BUNNY BABY pressed pace to stretch and tired. CREPE faltered after three-quarters. CHAPS did not appear to like the going.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:51. Off 5:52. Winner, Shandon Farm's ch. g. (9), by Ladkin—Golden Lassie II. Trained by J. J. Greely. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49.

DEAR AL: Selections at Havre De Grace.

Pompoon served notice on the Dixie Handicap eligibles that he's going to be a factor in the race by working a mile and an eighth in 2:01 on an off track. I don't know whether or not I'll take credit for a winner on Chief Evergreen. He ran far back but he was in the field and Flying Feet and Hats Off, his running mates, ran first and second. We haven't been doing so badly with the selections of late, but don't broadcast the fact. I don't want to change the luck. Clocker Mike arrived today. Says he missed the train. He was only two weeks late. I understand that Wayne Wright will ride War Admiral in the Seabiscuit race if Charlie Kurtsinger's suspension lasts that long. Allen Sternzdorf, one of Starter Milton's ground crew, died yesterday morning from pneumonia in a Baltimore hospital. He contracted a cold during the rainy weather at Bowie. Apprentice Jockey Lucas Dupps was forced to cancel his mounts for the day due to illness. Delaware Park will stage steeplechase races during the coming meeting. In answer to "F. G." here's some racing dates: Charles Town, May 16 to June 25; Hagerstown, July 12 to July 23; Cumberland, August 9 to August 20; Marlboro, August 23 to September 3; Timonium, September 5 to September 15. Marine Maid in the fourth race yesterday was the longest shot of the Maryland season. She was $703 to $1 and finished a convincing last.

BILL.

First race—Jolly Duchess turned on a nice brand of speed in her debut before tiring in the stretch. She probably needed that tightener and I expect her to go on to better things today. Red Jack has had several chances but is better than the last. Rough Buddy may take care of the others.

Second race—Hiblaze needed conditioning and faltered after showing excellent foot in that recent race at Bowie. With the right handling this one may stick it out. Miss Oak had little racing luck last out and is due to improve with clear sailing. I'm still waiting for Lilting to come through with a scorching effort.

Third race—Our Chuckie appears ready to handle a field of this sort. I'm going to string along. Ghost Flyer downed maidens impressively and is dangerous. Satin Marvel may be better than generally rated.

Fourth race—The Bomar entry of Little Shaver and Grand Slam appear capable of turning back this opposition. Both are in excellent condition. Winning Chance gets in well with 113 pounds. Savage Beauty has worked good.

Fifth race—Fiosilda was scratched when the track became slippery Monday. If the track becomes fast she should score in this group. Strophe turns on the heat the last part of it and probably will be along in time to be a threat. Queen Elizabeth to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Patient Saint picks up a purse on the big time each spring and this may be the spot for the annual crack down. That good race at Bowie is the tip off. The Mauler was short last out and is due to improve. Miss Tiptoe and Prince Pettie should be prominent.

Best bet—Ladino.

Walter Haight

There's a brand-new racer on Yancey Christmas' Marlboro farm. This long-legged chestnut colt was foaled on Easter Monday and is by Grand Time out of Royal Ballad . . . Christmas says he looks like a racing prospect despite his youth . . Grand Time is the sire of Rough Time, considered the fastest horse ever foaled in Maryland . . . Grand Time has a daughter out of Flambola, who is attracting much attention . . . the little filly is owned by Mrs. D. A. Buckley . . . Christmas has sold the contract he had on Jockey Ken McCombs . . . he did not have enough work to keep this brilliant young rider busy so he transferred him to B. F. Whitaker . . . however, Christmas will retain a "call" on the boy . . . the move is a swell break for McCombs . . . the Whitaker Stable owns Crepe and may start him in the Derby and Preakness . . . Widener, Swope and other New York bigwigs are breathing a sigh of relief now that Gov. Lehman has killed the dog-racing bill in the State . . . those backing the measure got it over every bump but the last one . . . this was the third time the Governor has vetoed the sport.

HAIGHT.

Havre de Grace crowds are above the average and betting is going along at a brisk pace in contrast to the dull showing of Bowie . . . many are crediting the opening of the Delaware track last year as a big boost to The Graw. The du Pont course, close to Philadelphia, developed a lot of brand-new norse fans who are now patronizing the upper Maryland track . . . the hat manufacturers of Danbury, Conn., who offered 50 top pieces to the sports writers who come closest to picking the Kentucky Derby finish, had planned to give the scribes $10 derbies . . . however, at the last minute they shifted to plain hats because their publicity department reported that they could not find a sports writer who went in for a derby . . . when the favorites were winning 50 per cent of the races at Bowie I heard a lot of yelling about the sport there. The bettors were supposed to be in their glory when the horses ran to form . . . but the truth is, racing is no go without the long-shots . . . how is a fellow going to get even without an occasional $50 mutuel?

• • • •

Tom Thorp, famous football referee, turf writer and track steward, will be the only holdover from the O'Hara era when Narragansett Park reopens . . . Thorp, however, quit last year and has been rehired by the new setup . . . If you have a cool $1,000,000 gathering dust in your chifferobe rawer, you can trade it for the Laurel race track . . . It is reported that James Butler, jr., wants to get out of the horse business and will peddle the plant to reliable people . . . it also is said that he wants to get rid of the Empire City track . . . both tracks have been consistent money makers . . . Appealing, the Motor City Stable's fleet sprinter, who set the pace in the Harford Handicap, broke down in that race and will be on the shelf for some time . . . Before last Saturday's Harford, Willie Booth, Denemark Stable trainer, said he believed Higher Cloud had a good chance if he broke with the field . . . Higher Cloud didn't break, wheeling instead and refusing to budge as the field galloped around the oval.

• • • •

Billmar, the Bomar Stable's Kentucky Derby candidate, is a full brother of Finance, the good handicap horse . . . Big things are being predicted for Lucas Dupps, the apprentice jockey . . . he first attracted attention in Florida last winter . . . at Bowie he was in the money on 20 of 26 mounts . . . They're trying to make me believe this came over the police radio: "Calling all cars, calling all cars, Mae West at Fourteenth and F streets, wearing red hat. That is all." . . . Minstrel Star must be a good student . . . On Saturday he delayed the start for so long that Starter Milton put him on the schooling list . . . Monday morning he went to the barrier and did so well that the same afternoon he was alowed to start and was away without much trouble. . . . The mare Chicina will be seen at the races no more . . . when she turned up at Bowie officials refused her entry because the Greentree Stable had ordered the registration papers of the mare destroyed . . . when she left that stable she was disposed of for purposes other than racing or breeding.

Errors Help Terps Make Lone Marker

Williamsburg, Va., April 19 (AP).—Rosy Waugh, William and Mary's pitching ace, held Maryland to a solitary hit and annexed three singles today to help the Indians win, 4 to 1.

The Terps' lone run came in the ninth when Waugh himself started a series of Indian miscues which allowed Maryland's Burns to cross the home plate without the aid of a hit.

For five innings Waugh pitched three-up, three-down ball and had set back sixteen consecutive batters before Burns came through in the sixth with a single.

William and Mary pecked away at the southpaw offerings of Wood, pushing across a run in both the second and fourth and tallying two more in the fifth on Frank Koss' long single to center.

They paid $20,000 to Memphis for Danny Taylor, who failed to stick, but their most staggering purchase was that of one Penner, a pitcher, who never did amount to much. The Cubs in 1929 felt constrained to give $63,000 for Penner. And in the same year they paid $65,000 for Lester Bell who, baseball men will tell you, was no $65,000 ball player.

From the minors the Cubs did buy a star infield combination in Billy Herman and Stanley Hack in 1931, but they didn't come cheaply. Their income tax report shows that the Cubs paid $55,400 for Herman and $35,000 for Hack.

Those income tax reports of the big league clubs are interesting. They reveal that Joe Cronin who in 1934 fetched $250,000 when Clark Griffith sold him to Tom Yawkey, cost the Pittsburgh Pirates only $300 in 1924. The same year, the Pirates paid $57,500 for a pitcher named C. P. Hill.

• • • •

There was nothing miserly, either about the way Connie Mack went into the market for players. He paid the Baltimore Orioles a total of $181,600 for Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw, according to the tax reports. But Mack got most of his money back in 1932 when he sold Dykes, Simmons and Hass to the White Sox for $150,000. That same year, however, he paid $40,000 for a coast league pitcher named Tony Freitas and tossed Jimmy DeShong into the deal.

And the New York Yankees did not pay the Red Sox $125,000 for Babe Ruth in 1919, as reported. They paid only $100,000, and it was spread over two-year installments. Their agreement with the Sox, moreover, read that if Ruth demanded a bonus in excess of $10,000 in addition to his yearly salary, the Sox were to pay $5,000 of any amount the Yankees were forced to give him.

It would have been nice for Ruth to have known that the Yankees were expecting him to demand a bonus in excess of $10,000 for Ruth always was content with the salaries he was drawing, sans bonuses. We print all this just by way of illustrating how tough it is to get the dollar sign out of baseball.

Steve Mamakos, local welterweight, who won the most important fight of his brief career the other night at the Arena, once hustled peanuts at the Washington Auditorium . . . that was when the grapplers were plying their trade at the "Food Show Shoppe" . . . One of the real surprises of the opening game apparently overlooked by the scribes was the hitting of Mel Almada whose spring failures had threatened to bench him . . . the young Mexican outfielder, leading off for the Nats, supplied the first thrill of the season when he planted a wicked drive in the rightfield stands, which failed by a few feet of being a home run . . . but he was not to be denied a hit and on the third pitch from Harry Kelley doubled to center . . . and then in the third inning he was robbed of a possible double as Russ Peters turned in one of the fielding gems of recent years . . . Incidentally, Peters' magnificent stop and throw failed to impress Almon Williams, A's pitcher, who claimed Skeeter Newsome would have pocketed the ball without leaving his feet . . . Newsome, slated to be the regular shortstop, suffered a fractured skull in a training game and possibly will be lost for the season . . .

Zeke Bonura, unlike many ball players, is a radio announcer's delight . . . interviewed by Bill Coyle prior to the opener Bonura needed neither cues nor urging to talk rapidly and intelligently for fully three minutes . . . the source of his nickname, "Zeke," which has been traced to many quarters, was Knute Rockne, who, after seeing the husky Italian under the showers, uttered, "Lord, what a physique" . . . the name was shortened and has stuck since

Many wise baseball men are touting the Pittsburgh Pirates as the coming National League champion . . . with one "If . . . th "If" is reserved until the Buccaneers show signs of a renaissance against the Giants, who wield baseball's biggest jinx on Pie Traynor's crew . . . records show Bill Terry's boys have taken 62 of 97 games from Pittsburgh in the last five years . . . Sam Baugh and Ray Buivid, who staged a great individual football duel in the Cotton Bowl game of '37, will continue their battle on the diamonds this season, for both play with American Association clubs . . . Dodgers Beat Phils; Cubs Win Over Reds

Five Hit Homers; Score Is 12 to 5 After Hit Barrage.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 19 (AP).—Although their ace fireballer, Van Lingle Mungo, wasn't around to see the finish of the proceedings, the Brooklyn Dodgers got off to a slugging start in the National League wars today by walloping the Phillies, 12 to 5, with a 15-hit barrage.

They landed on Lefty Lamaster, Hugh Mulcahy, Al Smith and Pete Sivess from time to time during the game fo 30 bases, finally putting the decision on ice with a six-run attack in the eighth. Mungo lasted through the fourth inning and Luke Hamlin, taking over in the fifth, took credit for the victory.

Altogether, five homers were hit by Ernie Koy, Dolph Camilli and Cookie Lavagetto for the Brooklyns and Rookie Dutch Mueller and Chuck Klein for the Phils. Lavagetto also collected a brace of doubles.

Blows by Bryant, Collins Win Game, 8-7 for Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, April 19.—Held helpless for two frames, the pennant-inspired Chicago Cubs walloped three Cincinnati pitchers today, and aided by two homers, came from behind to win the National League opener here, 8 to 7, before a crowd of 34,148.

Clay Bryant, who was belted from the box in the fourth inning, accounted for the Cubs' first scoring in the third with a home run over the leftfield wall, and Jimmy Collins, with a record of four out of five hits for the day, larruped the ball for another in the sixth.

Four runs on as many hits marked the Reds' big third frame and paved the way for Bryant's departure in the fourth to make way first for the veteran Charley Root and then for Bob Logan.

Held to six safeties thereafter, Bill McKechnie's men neverthless loaded the bases in the ninth, and scored one run.

St. Albans Net Team Defeats McKinley High

St. Albans crack tennis team proved to be too strong for Tech yesterday as they downed the McKinley lads, 9-0, on the courts at St. Albans.

Wilmer, St. Albans No. 1 player, was the spearhead of the winners' attack as he defeated eller, Tech's star, 6—2, 6—3, and paired with Rothe to win the first doubles match.

Jake Ruppert, Babe Ruth Sit in Same Box

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, April 19.—Col. Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, and his erstwhile $80,000 hird hand, Babe Ruth, sat in the same box at the Giants' opener . . . Novel press box theory: "Publication of story that Joe DiMaggio was about to capitulate had the effect of postponing holdout's overtures to Yankee management" . . . Did you notice the number of newcomers in vital batting order spots for the openers? . . . Including Rizzo, of the Pirates, Slaughter, of the Cards, Wright, of the Senators, and Barna, of the Athletics, in the third slot, Craft, of the Reds, in the clean-up position . . .

• • • •

This might be described, with apologies, as "whistling while you work for the Giants," or "who's afraid of the big bad Dean?" . . . says Manager Bill (Terrible) Terry: "We'll know more about how much Dean is going to help the Cubs after he's pitched a few games . . . I still think this is the best club New York has had, since I became manager, and I think it has the answers, including more punch, better pitching, and the necessary reserves."

"It looks like a better race now," conceded Shortstop Dick Bartell . . . "the Cubs evidently figured they had to have more and better pitching, to make it close, but don't forget Dean will have to win 17 games before he equalizes what Davis and Shoun did last year" . . . Wally Berger, who's pressing Hank Leiber for centerfield duty, remarked: "It looks like a break for Dean, who usually got cuffed around by the Cubs, but I look for the Giants to get out in front and stay there" . . .

Slick Castleman, recovered sufficiently from his back ailment to pitch in batting practice now, will be on the regular firing line for the Giants by May . . . "even without him now, we've got the best staff in the league," adds Terry . . .

Reinhart Leaves For N. Y. Seeking G. W. Court Foes

Bill Reinhart, George Washington football and basketball coach, who returned home Sunday night from a business trip to Chicago, left yesterday for New York where he will continue his efforts to book leading court teams and scout scholastic players.

On his Windy City visit, Reinhart completed negotiations for several basketball encounters and lined up many more. A tilt with Army at West Point will be one of the features of the 1938-39 season. Games with Butler, Clemson, Toledo and DePaul also are definitely scheduled.

The Colonial mentor expressed doubt yesterday that his team would appear in Madison Square Garden this winter but stated that at least two strong Philadelphia fives will be met in the Quaker City.

SETS NEW SMOKING VOGUE
New times...changed ideas...NEW VOGUES. With the year 1938, Society struck a NEW KEYNOTE. Look about where well-groomed men and women gather—for instance, any smart dance—and mark what many men are smoking. You will see a lithe, gracefully modeled cigar. Most of you will promptly identify the famous Robt. Burns Panatela de Luxe.
Genteel shape explains much of its vogue. It fits into the social scene. Its effect of alert manliness harmonizes with a well-bred face and correct attire. But more important is the complete smoking satisfaction which men have come to find only in a cigar 100% choice Havana filler. Robt. Burns Panatela de Luxe is the gentleman's cigar at a moderate price, a precise balance to produce ultra-mildness without loss of rich Havana flavor.
Try a Robt. Burns Panatela de Luxe and observe how it 'belongs' with a well-dressed man. Learn, too, how it fulfills your idea of smoking enjoyment.
There are four sons of the fine old Robt. Burns family: Panatela de Luxe, 10¢—Corona, 10¢—Perfecto Grande, 10¢—Queens, 2 for 25¢. All smart, up-to-date shapes, 100% choice Havana filler.

Upsets Mark Opening Round in District Women's Golf Team Play

Columbia Players Take Two Events

Congressional, Army and Navy and Manor Also Winners; Mrs. Enge, Mrs. Mitchell Get Three Points for Beaver Dam.

Upsets marked the first round of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association team matches yesterday, Beaver Dam's defending champions among the second teams losing to Columbia while Chevy Chase, title-holders in the third team class also lost to a Columbia team by a 6 to 3 margin.

The second team matches at Manor found Congressional, Army and Navy and the hosts winning with little difficulty in other matches. The Congressional sextet routed Washington, 7 to 2; the service club's representatives blanked Woodmount, 9 to 0, and Chevy Chase scored but 1½ points against the Manorites.

The third team maches at Army and Navy were decided by closer margins, Indian Spring winning 5½ to 3½, over Congressional; Kenwood downing Manor, 6½ to 2½, and the Columbia delegation upsetting Chevy Chase by 6 to 3. The hosts drew a bye.

Mrs. Ora Emge and Mrs. R. Cal Mitchell, of the Beaver Dam team, won all three points from Columbia's twosome, Mrs. H. M. Brundage and Mrs. W. E. Hall, but the remainder of the Columbia line-up lost but a half-point and they loom as the team to beat among the second teams.

Columbia's surprisingly strong third team entry found the points split in all three matches. Mrs. H. King Cornwell and Mrs. A. C. Minnix scored 2½ points over Mrs. Oscar Coolican and Mrs. C. Howland Chase. Mrs. DeFarges and Mrs. Lacey scored a like amount and Mrs. C. D. Bills and Mrs. A. S. Gardiner salvaged a single tally against Mrs. Seldin Chapin and Mrs. Walter White.

Roosevelt, Gonzaga And St. Johns Win

Roosevelt defetaed Tech, 9 to 0, yesterday and tied Georgetown Prep for the lead in the Metropolitan Scholastic League. The feature encounters of the day found Gonzaga defeating St. Johns, 5 to 4, and Western nosing out Wilson, 5½ to 3. In the other match Central scored its first victory, swamping Anacostia, 9 to 0, at Washingtoh.

Buddy Sharley scored a 72 over the Columbia course to pace the Gonzagans with a 4 and 3 win over Sullivan. Two matches went to the nineteenth hole, with Rehkopf and Kelley, of the Johnnies, victors in each. The Gonzagans clinched the victory in the first two foursomes, scoring five points. The losers swept the points in the third match.

George Vass, Western ace, won over Ralph Bogart, Wilson captain, on the final green, shooting a 74 at Manor, while the loser was a stroke higher.

Wilson scored in each foursome but could not muster over 1½ points in any and accepted their second defeat in three matches. The winners are only a half-match behind the leaders with a trio of victories.

Roosevelt scored another shutout over the hapless Tech team, winning 9 to 0, at Woodmont. They can take the league lead by defeating St. Johns on Friday.

Weber Placed on Arena Card; Will Wrestle Siano Tomorrow

Hails From North Carolina; Thunderbird to Meet Joe Savoldi.

To a star-studded wrestling card scheduled tomorrow night at his Arena, Maestro Joe Turner has added still another feature—a wrestler with a homespun handle—Victor Weber. Victor may turn out to be another of those North Carolina Indians away from the reservation A. W. O. L., but the name sounds good, nevertheless.

Weber meets Tony Siano, former All-American grid star while at Fordham, later quarterback for the Redskin professional football team, and now a spoke in the mat wheel. It will be a 30-minute engagement.

Joe Savoldi and Chief Thunderbird grapple in the feature event, and Turner has liberally seasoned the card with beef, color and temperament. Most of the color and action will originate in the main go, but the preliminary boys will have their minutes.

Chief Sanooke, 325-pound Redskin, who did not play professional football, will argue with Juan Olaguivel, the Spanish Woodchopper, who must spot his huge opponent at least 100 pounds—catch-as-catch-can weights. Sanooke met Dean Detton the first time he performed here, and lost on a disqualification cause by continued use of the strangle hold.

Jesse James, usually a featured artist, appears in a supporting role against Jose Rodriguez, an apprentice villain, whose leer and cunningly unfair tactics have improved immeasurably since he began working in this vicinity. James will win handily, if he doesn't break an arm or leg, but you can count on Jose to get in a little dirty work before it's all over.

Bhu Pinder, bare-foot boy from India across the bay—and an ocean or two, faces Tony Milano in another 30-minute fracas, and this, too, has all the earmarks of lively entertainment. ATCHISON.

JOE SAVOLDI.

Wendlandt Wins From Goldstein

George Wendlandt grabbed the No. 1 singles spot in the annual all-Y. M. C. A. handball tournament by scoring a comparatively easy three-game victory over Gustave Goldstein in last night's title round. The scores were 21-10, 19-21, 21-13.

Walter Engelhardt and George Newman played brilliant but spotty handball to eke out a close decision over the veterans W. C. Woodward and Leonard Vineberg for the doubles title. After winning the first game 21-13 and losing the second 14-21, the Engelhardt-Newman duo rallied desperately from a 15-7 deficit in the third game to run out the game and match at 21-18.

Emil Leonard Hurls Today

Big Knuckle-Ball Artist to Face Athletics.

Emil Leonard, the Nats' $7,500 investment from Atlanta, will take his knuckle ball to the mound at Griffith Stadium today in an attempt to bring the Nats their third straight victory and a sweep of the series with the Athletics.

Manager Connie Mack, who has seen two of his prize right handers routed by the left-handed Washington batting order, is expected to send his southpaw rookie, Bill Kalfass, to the mound. Kalfass last year was with Trenton in the Eastern League.

The appearance of a southpaw pitching for the Athletics will find Manager Bucky Harris countering with a changed Washington batting order. He will bench Centerfielder Mel Almada and Second Baseman Buddy Myer in favor of Al Simmons and Ossie Bluege, who will add right-handed hitting power to the Nats' line-up. Simmons will patrol centerfield.

Connie Mack had a harrowing time of it with his shortstops yesterday. After Russ Peters had fumbled one ball and came perilously close to booting another, Mack turned the job over to Wayne Ambler. Ambler made a damaging muff on his first chance and the error figured in two Washington runs in the sixth inning.

Johnny Stone made his first hit of the season when he singled to right in the fifth inning. He had gone hitless in seven times at bat before he delivered the blow.

Boston Run To Pawson

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 19.—Leslie Pawson, 34-year-old Pawtucket, R. I., playground instructor, today became the fourth "repeater" in the 42-year history of the famous Boston A. A. marathon by defeating Pat Dengis, of Baltimore, regarded as the country's greatest long-disance runner, by almost a fifth of a mile.

Despite the midsummer heat, Pawson's time for the 26-mile-385-yard journey over the torturous hilly course from Hopkinton to the Back Bay section of Boston was 2 hours 35 minutes 34 4-5 seconds, only 4 minutes 33 1-5 seconds slower than the record he set when he gained his first triumph five years ago.

Pawson, with Arlington's Johnny Kelly, the 1935 victor, trailing by a step, forged to the front of the pack 11 miles from the starting line and they raced shoulder to shoulder for five more miles before the Rhode Islander shook him off on the second of Newton's string of hills.

Morgan Wins Verdict Over Sixto Escobar

Bantam Champ Punches Winner in Dressing Room But Scrap Is Averted.

By the United Press.

Detroit, April 19.—Kayo Morgan, of Detroit, decisively outpointed World Bantamweight Champion Sixto Escobar, of Puerto Rico, tonight in a 10-round nontitle fight at Olympic Arena.

Morgan received the unanimous decision of both ringside judges and Referee Slim McClelland. The Michigan boy carried the fight to the islander from start to finish and rocked him with a hard left to the jaw in the ninth.

Escobar's performance was puzzling. He appeared to be holding back, and not once did he drive into Morgan in the style that won him the bantam crown from Harry Jeffra in February.

Both men were overweight, Escobar 6 pounds over the 118 limit at 124, and Morgan scaling 120. The clownish antics of Morgan baffled the swarthy Sixto, whose best punch was a hard right that nearly closed Morgan's left eye in the seventh. Morgan kept out of reach most of the time, however.

In Escobar's dressing room after the fight Morgan came up to the champion to shake hands. Escobar rose from his chair and planted a right with his bare fist on Morgan's chin. The blow knocked Morgan into the arms of his manager, Harry Baxter. Several friends intervened and prevented further fighting.

Boxing Forum Approves Titular Commission

Rome, April 19 (U.P.).—The International Boxing Forum today approved creation of an International Championship Commission, whose duty will be to name the No. 1 challengers to the world titleholders in the various categories. Champions must defend against designated challengers within six months.

Three Americans, two Italians, one Englishman and one German were elected to the seven-man commission. The United States representatives were Gen. John J. Phelan, of the New York State Athletic Commission; Edward J. Foster, executive secretary of the National Boxing Association, and Joseph Triner, chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission.

Arcelli Bout Puts Pacho On the Spot

Los Angeles Boy Will Be Pressed to Justify Press Agents.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Battle-scarred Bobby Pacho, coffee-colored Mexican welterweight, has a double trick on his hands Monday night at the Arena, the least of which is boxing Werther Arcelli in the 10-round feature. The hardest portion of his two-barrelled task will be living up to the glowing reports of his punching prowess which are seeping in through publicity agents.

Pacho, policeman of his class, had a couple of head-on collisions with Champion Barney Ross in 1935, and had him on the deck both times. That's in the record books. Some newspaper reports say that only the bell saved him at the end of the ninth round in the first engagement. Ross, however, was leading by a couple of laps on points, and by going the distance won the duke.

They met again and Ross unceremoniously scraped his nose on the carpet again, only earlier in the bout. Again he went the full distance to win the verdict. He gained a wholesome respect for the Mexican emittenman, however, and later sniffed disdainfully a sizable lump of sugar for tangling with him with the title at stake.

Pacho's record, however, does not make him out to be a champion or ranking contender. He lost to Wesley Ramey, Pedro Montanez, Glenn Lee, Kid Moro, Ralph Zenelli, Leonard Del Genio, and was knocked out by Ceferino Garcia, but, on the other hand, you've got to be fairly good to get bouts with men of their caliber.

Arcelli won by a technical knockout over Battling Burroughs on his last trip here, but was lucky to get off that easily. Mr. Burroughs—a rough, uncouth gentleman with little knowledge of ring tactics and even less interest in them—was crowding the veteran all the way and giving him an uncomfortable session.

Pacho, capable as he is, however, will be better suited to Arcelli's more polite style of socking, and it may develop into an interesting duel.

Comedy Skaters Will Feature New 'Ice' Show

Colorful Pageant to Open at Shoreham's Blue Room May 2.

By Chanticleer

An ice show featuring comedy skaters and dancing stars is on the entertainment schedule of the Shoreham's Blue Room, starting May 2. This show promises to excel the ice carnival of last year. The whole floor is to be covered with synthetic ice and a colorful pageant is promised. This week the Blue Room offering includes Marcella Claire, a blonde toe dancer; Enters and Borgia, dance team, and Henry Nestor, Washington singer.

Today marks the 184th night for Beverly Stull at the Mayfair. The girl has what it takes to keep them coming back. Featured also are Perry Martin and Nedra Andrea.

The fan mail of Paul Kain and his boys has increased this week to warrant a heavy radio schedule. Starting Tuesday, they will be on the air four times a week—Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday—over a C. B. S. hookup.

Analyzes Character.

Khani Kashan, who analyzes character at the Russian Troika, has the answer as to why you are not making friends and influencing people. His uncanny ability to read in a glance what your friends have observed only after years of association is remarkable. The new show at the Troika includes an 8-minute burlesque of "Othello."

Did you see or hear a dance done in wooden shoes? Try it sometime if you think it's easy. But better still, drop in to the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh tonight. It's "Tulip Time in Holland," and Virginia Hunter's Pall Mallettes, as "The Six Little Gretchens," clickety-clack a mean rhythm in the sabots. That Magic Man, Milbourne Christopher, is there every night pulling rabbits out of hats, etc. He's a "prestidigitator," but don't try that word on the little woman when you are trying to convince her you're cold sober.

It was a happy thought on the part of the Glen Echo management to provide "name bands" this year for the Spanish Garden Ballroom. Little Joe Hart's orchestra, who bowed in on the opening night, is giving the customers plenty of "swing." Little Joe stays until closing time Saturday night, and next week the ballroom will welcome Ralph Webster and his N. B. C. orchestra, featuring the voices of Jayne Denton, Russ Bodine, Bill Cavanaugh and Tiny Hardesty, called the "three-ring circus of vocal variety."

Subs for Goodmah.

Our friend Johnny Shaw, maestro at the Madrillon, was given the honor of pinch hitting for Benny Goodman the other night at the Raleigh Hotel when that king of swing was scheduled to appear for the benefit of the Committee for Spanish Relief . . . Benny was delayed for an hour in New York, and Johnny was conceded the honor of playing until he arrived. Irving Levick, celebrated local musician, was tendered a birthday party at the Madrillon this week.

Those dignified looking women whom you saw in the Carlton cocktail lounge today, listening to the rhythm of the King's Jesters, were some of the visiting D. A. R.'s who were drawn into the lounge by the strains of the music wafted out into the lobby.

Plays at Mayfair

Featured at Lotus.

The headliners this week at the Lotus include Dick and Dotty Jones, direct from Broadway, who need only the hot trumpets and swingy music of the Bill Strickland Capitolian orchestra to bring out the grace and rhythm of their two entertaining dance numbers; Roy, Rita and Roule, who offer a trio of waltzes and adagios, and the Broadway Show Girl's Chorus who have the week's best novelty, a parody on the Doll's Dance.

Libby Frazier is the charming lass at the Ambassador's Hi-Hat lounge who charms with her rendition of Ti pi Tin and Dipsy Doodle. The String Swingsters provide the accompaniment.

Leo Lissee, the popular Washington emcee, introduces a splendid show this week at the Bamboo Gardens. Valdex and Peggy, a comic dance team; the Leon twins and Betty Jayne, a whirlwind eyeful, are part of the swell floor show. The Parker Brothers and Lynn do acrobatics and adagios.

Wheat Prices Decline With Fading Exports

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 19.—Wheat fell a cent a bushel in Chicago today, impelled chiefly by total lack of export demand, together with downturns of securities.

Apparent indifference which the Liverpool market displayed relative to inflationary developments in this country acted as a curb on buyers here. Other bearish factors were rains likely to assure good yields in Australia. Reports of favorable progress of seeding in American spring crop territory received also considerable notice.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 3-7 to ⅞ lower compared with yesterday's finish; May, 83½ to 83⅝; July, 82½ to 82¼. Corn, ⅛ to ¼ down; May, 59¾; July, 61½. Oats, unchanged to ⅛ off. Rye, varying from ⅛ decline to ½ advance, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents setback.

Facts and Figures On Local Securities

New York, April 19 (AP).—Business Figures on Washington Securities, published annually by Y. E. Booker & Co., investment bankers, and compiled by Myles H. Quayle, of that firm, is now being distributed.

The 92-page booklet gives the history, earning record and other pertinent data on 89 Washington corporations and the directors, officers and statistics of all the Washington banks. The rule governing the investment of trust funds, adopted by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and an explanation of the District of Columbia intangible tax and the real estate also are included.

C.& O. Supports Young in Fight For Control

Majority of Stock Held by Public Backs Present Management.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 19.—Stockholders of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway voted 61.68 per cent of the common stock today in support of Robert R. Young in his fight for control of the road. This gave Young backing of the greater portion of stock held by the public.

Stock not held by the public is owned 30.8 per cent by the Chesapeake Corporation and 3.3 per cent by the Alleghany Corporation, parent holding company of the Chesapeake Corporation. This stock was not represented in the vote today.

Represented at the meeting were proxies for 3,172,159 shares of common stock. Officials said this represented the largest number of stockholders by person or proxy at any meeting in the history of the railroad.

The vote represented the response of the shareholders to the proxy solicitation of the C. & O. management and constitutes their expression of indorsement of the present directorate and executives of the road.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Decline in Dull Trading Under Pressure of Poor Corporation Reports.

New York, April 19.—Dullness increased in financial markets. Stocks edged a little further over into the shade on smaller sales volume. Trading was unbroken along its irregularly lower course, but last prices were only fractionally below the previous closing levels. United States Government bonds were fairly steady and commodities were mixed. May wheat closed ⅛ of a cent lower at 83½ cents a bushel.

Speculative markets gave a fine performance of absolute indifference to the somewhat frightened attempts of the Administration to pull the country out of the depression by means of poorly spliced tow lines and uncertain navigational methods. It is now recognized that, even if some form of inflation should do the trick, action is still some distance away. Meanwhile some of the proposals to put Government money to work would seem, according to old-fashioned economic reasoning, to promise the opposite effect.

Postponing Recovery.

Jesse Jones, of the RFC, for example, proposes to lend RFC funds to companies needing money to carry inventories and also to lend to underwriting houses hung up with sour securities. That will be similar to putting more ice into the box to keep assets well frozen, and no depression can be broken until inventories and securities are thawed out. The sharp decline in bank commercial loans, and in loans on securities, to some extent, in the past year, is eloquent testimony to the eeffect that inventories have been worked off—that is, have gone into consumption—and that securities have settled down to prices commensurate with current profits.

Any attempt by the Government to stop that process will postpone recovery. Inventories will be worked off when prices appeal to consumers, and as inventories decline new orders for replacement will appear. Until new orders come there scarcely can be much pickup in manufacturing. Inventory and security loans may help to give the appearance of solvency to some businesses, but what is needed for business is not suspended animation but a clearing of the debris and reconstruction.

Bone Crushers.

Meanwhile the Treasury announced that formal action had been taken to carry out the President's promise to Congress made last week on desterilization of gold. Presumably no more incoming gold will be turned over to the inactive fund, but will be allowed to add its share to excess bank reserves, thus further depressing money rates and piling up eventual trouble for the Government bond market. It was no surprise that Representative Patman, of Texas, praised the action as something that would "break the backbone" of the depression, for it was Patman who helped break the backbone of the 1933 depression with his soldiers' bonus bill. He and his brother inflationists nad high spenders doubtless will be ready with another back-breaker when another depression (in spite of the economic planners) rolls around.

Several rays of light were flashed into actual trade conditions today by chief executives of companies holding yearly stockholders' meetings. Walter Chrysler told his meeting that sales were running about 40 per cent of last year and that used cars were still a problem. United States Rubber operations are going forward on a "break even" basis. American Locomotive prospects are "not very happy." On the other hand, some of the executives were hopeful of improvement during the next few months.

Leaders Lose 1 to 2 Points.

It would require something much more substantial or spectacular, or both, to rouse the stock market for more than a day or two out of the rut running through the reports on the state of business. Profit declines and uncertainity over the future now filling the financial reports do not provide a favorable setting for a market advance. Common stocks were pushed down as much as 2 points for leading issues and some of the volatile shares gave up 4 points, but the majority were moderately stubborn.

Preferred shares were mixed and gains for them where made were smaller than those of yesterday. A few common shares with stable dividend records had a firm tone. In declining for the second successive day stocks lost all the ground gained last week and currently are quoted a point or two above the lows of that period.

United States Steel lost 2 points in dipping below 46, compared with a closing price last week of 48⅝ and a low of 44⅛. Anaconda, du Pont, General Motors, Smelters and Chrysler ranged 2 to 8 points under final prices of last week. Chemicals weakened 1 to 5 points and steels lost 1 to 2 points. Tobaccos turned down 1 to 2 points, as did motors, metals, oils, rubbers and farms.

Public Skepticism.

The senior officer of one of the large trust companies, who has been talking to a good many customers of the bank lately, finds that business men are comparatively unimpressed with the administration's inflation-gold, desterilization-spending program. The general feeling is that "it's a shot in the arm which didn't work so well before; why should it do any good now?" Business men, this bank official says, seem still to be imbued with the idea that securities go up because of profits and that dividends are paid out of something more tangible than inflation of idle cash piles.

General Electric.

General Electric reported profits of 25 cents a share in first quarter, compared with 40 cents a share in first quarter of last year. The lower returns were foreshadowed a short time ago when the company reduced the dividend. On a percentage basis the drop in profits is somewhat less than the average for large companies, but it is sharp enough. Wall Street seems surprised at any company report which shows any profits at all. Second quarter promises to be worse than the first quarter for most companies.

Two Forgotten Men Here, Says Maj. Angas

New York, April 19.—In a foreword to "The Coming Rescue Inflation" published today by Maj. L. L. B. Angas, author of "The Coming American Boom," which appeared in July, 1934, he says:

"A study of stocks is a study of profits. A study of unemployment is a study of losses. It is the recurrent unemployment of capital and labor which retards our civilization. The prosperity of workers depends directly on the wages of capital, and indirectly on sound money management; and yet these remain the two forgotten men at Washington."

Cotton Drops Under 9 Cents

New York, April 19 (AP).—Cotton was easier today under foreign selling and liquidation. July declined from 9.01 to 8.88 and closed at 8.89, with final prices 13 to 15 points net lower.

The market opened 6 to 9 points lower in response to the disappointing reopening at Liverpool following a four-day holiday and under offerings from abroad. Trade and scattered buying caused prices to recover to within a few points of the previous close during the morning but heaviness of the stock market and declines in most other commodities brought out selling by recent buyers. Selling was not aggressive, but the demand was slow.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was barely steady today and closed at net declines of 1 to 5 points under scattered liquidation and commission house selling promoted by the action of lard and lower cotton market. Sales were 137 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal. May closed 8.39, July 8.18, September 8.13, October 8.11, December 8.02.

Inquiry Begun Into Affairs Of N.Y. Brokers

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., announced today that he was investigating Burco, Inc., investment company, shortly after its common and preferred stock and warrants were suspended from trading in the New York Curb Exchange. Investigators vainly sought to locate Americus J. Leonard, president of the firm, at his Broadway office.

Assistant Attorney General Ambrose J. McCall, in charge of the securities bureau, said: "Several of the persons who are officers of Burco, Inc., were also connected in some way with the pending investigation into the practices of Prentice & Brady in connection with the First Income Trading Corporation and the Continental Securities Corporation."

Bank Profits In First Quarter Under Year Ago

Loan Totals Reduced About 7 Per Cent from Same 1937 Period.

New York, April 19.—Indicated first-quarter earnings of leading banks, as computed from March condition statements were generally well below earnings for the similar period of 1937 and were also lower than for the last quarter of 1937, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today.

Although banks are making strong efforts to bolster earnings in the face of adverse conditions, betterment is practically impossible until business conditions improve and the demand for loans again turns upward.

The decline in earnings in the first quarter was due principally to continuation of the downward trend of loan totals which began in the last quarter of 1937. Loans were reduced about 7 per cent in the first quarter of 1938. Although a large part of the decline was in loans to brokers and dealers, which provide a relatively small return, there is as yet no indication of any more than seasonal improvement in the more important commercial loans, the trend of which is still downward.

Deposits showed only a minor decline during the first quarter of 1938. Government bond holdings were mostly somewhat lower, except in instances where particularly heavy loan reductions were offset by increasing "Governments." "Other investments" were mostly higher. Indeed, figures for the group of reporting member banks in 101 leading cities show that the decline in holdings of Government bonds (about 3 per cent) was entirely offset by increases in miscellaneous investments.

D. A. R. Always Clear of Debt, Report Shows

Mrs. Becker Discloses the Magazine Has Reached 10,000 Circulation.

The National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, does not owe a cent to the outside world and has never been in the red. Mrs. William A. Becker, president general, in her annual report at the opening business session yesterday, partly paralleled the report of Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., treasurer general, in announcing the sound financial condition of the organization.

Improvements and repairs have been made on the three buildings of the D. A. R.—the Administration Building, Memorial Continental Hall and Constitution Hall; salaries of the staff have been restored to a predepression basis also; $30,000 has been laid aside in the employes' pension fund and a reserve fund of $40,000 a year has been set up for the past two years, she said. In addition, the society has given $1,600 a year to D. A. R. schools—Tamassee and Kate Duncan Smith—and $1,000 to the Red Cross for flood relief.

Money has been devoted to expansion as well as maintenance, she pointed out, including under this heading the expansion of the magazine, the extension service in the genealogical department, the museum and library work and committee activities.

10,000 Take Magazine.

She announced the magazine, under the new editor, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, had reached the 10,000 mark in subscription, and termed it the society's greatest potential source of influence and income. She added that she hoped it would eventually go to each member as part of the membership dues.

Much of the remainder of the president general's report was devoted to the work carried on among young people by the D. A. R. This has been stressed during her administration and its program greatly extended.

"Great increase has been manifested in youth activities all along the line," she said. "Approved schools, junior American citizens, girl home makers, good citizenship contests, the good citizenship pilgrimage, sponsorship of C. A. R. societies, befriending boys and girls, and the many community projects sponsored by our young women and aimed at service and helpfulness.

"As the future of our country must depend upon the education and training of its youth, we have doubled our energies in all that concerns their welfare and have broadened our program in recognition of their needs.

"Over 80,000 boys and girls, ranging in age from 6 to 18, belong to junior American citizen clubs. Thousands of young people have been befriended through this movement in the D. A. R., thousands have been given material aid, clothes, car fare, pocket money, food, opportunity to follow a chosen course by some close and interested friend, permitting closer contact than that other great service of student loans and scholarships which are carrying so many young people to the realization of their dreams."

Speaks of Defense.

Turning to the program of national defense sponsored by the D. A. R., she said:

"National defense means all that goes for the preservation of our spiritual heritage is becoming clearer and clearer to our people. It does not mean fighting with guns, but fighting with truths and supporting such military preparedness for our Nation as may indicate to the world that we have something worth defending which we will defend with our lives if need be. The more our people are convinced of the value of the heritage, the less likely that guns will be needed to defend it."

D. A. R. Pages Celebrate With Annual Ball at Mayflower

D. A. R. Juniors Honor Leader At Assembly

To Provide Scholarship as Memorial to Daughter of Mrs. Pouch.

Mrs. William H. Booth, national director of the D. A. R. junior membership committee, received a surprise tribute at yesterday's annual junior assembly, held in Continental Hall, in connection with the D. A. R. Congress.

The group of young women voted by an overwhelming majority to establish a scholarship as a memorial to their leader's daughter. In a spontaneous gesture of appreciation for Mrs. Pouch's guidance, the juniors pledged $123 from the floor as the nucleus for the scholarship.

During the annual election, which took place during the assembly, Miss Dorothy Evans, of Oak Park, Ill., was chosen national chairman, and Mrs. Frank L. Harris, of Racine, Wis., the retiring chairman, was named adviser.

New vice chairmen are Miss Edra Dahlin, of Cherokee, Iowa; Mrs. John Franklin Boyd, jr., of Charlotte, N. C.; Miss Priscilla N. Clough, of Roxbury, Mass., and Miss Amelia Hughes, of Los Angeles.

Miss Marion Lund, of Buffalo, was chosen recording secretary; Miss Helen Bunten, of Takoma Park, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Latham Lambert, of New Haven, Conn., treasurer. Mrs. Edmunds A. Blowers, of Detroit, was renamed editor of Echoes, the juniors' publication, and Miss Helen M. Scott was re-elected chairman of junior news in the D. A. R. magazine.

Speakers at the meeting were Mrs. Pouch, President General Mrs. William A. Becker, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, editor of the National Historical Magazine, and Mrs. Russell William Magna, during whose term as president general the juniors were organized.

Arndt

acted as marshal of the flight, trying to make herself heard above the buzz of voices in the president general's room, giving directions as to places in line. She and her assistants clapped their hands, commanding a moment of silence while she could be heard to call out Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, but the lull lasted briefly and the shouting and hand-clapping were repeated.

Line Moves Smoothly.

Flowers and trains which had to be handled at the same time complicated the lining-up, but once formed the procession moved smoothly. Bouquets were not quite so numerous as last year. One carried in the arms and a corsage on the shoulder seemed the rule rather than from two to four which were carried by some of the women last year.

Most of the officers, like the president general, wore the gowns in which they had appeared at the opening ceremony the night before. Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., incoming president general, was in white and carried white orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. William H. Pouch, president of the National Society, Children of the American Revolution, as well as organizing secretary general of the Daughters, wore gray lace and carried a large bouquet of orchids. Mrs. Loren Edgar Rex, State regent of Kansas and candidate for chaplain general, carried no flowers, but wore around her neck a lei of pink carnations, delicate contrast to her black lace dress.

Mrs. Becker at Pages Ball.

Mrs. George Barnett, chairman of the guest committee, was in ice blue satin and Mrs. Benjamin Harrison Lingo, vice chairman, wore black lace and a corsage of orchids. Others on the committee were Mrs. George Wilbur Musgrave, of Laurel, Md., in black satin; Miss Anne Tuohy, in a quilted blue chiffon; Mrs. Ross T. McIntyre, in black net with which she carried a white marabou cape; Mrs. Conrad Syme, wearing black taffeta and Mrs. Frank Mondell in black chiffon.

After the reception, the president general and members of her cabinet went to the Mayflower with police escort to attend the pages' ball.

The dancers formed an aisle down the ballroom when the official party arrived and, led by Miss Jenkins and her vice chairman, Miss Martha Morris, as color bearers, Mrs. Becker and her officers marched through in a gala procession and around to her box. From there she greeted the guests briefly and the dancing was then resumed. Her personal page, Miss Beryl Hague, of New Jersey, who is her niece and one of the most attractive of the girls serving the Congress, last night wore blue embroidered mousseline de soie.

Papal Envoy to Officiate.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, will officiate at ceremonies installing the Most Rev. Thomas J. Walsh as first archbishop of the newly created archdiocese of Newark, April 27, it was announced here yesterday.

2 D. C. Girls Share D. A. R. Spotlight

Two Washington girls shared the spotlight with young women from all parts of the country at yesterday's annual meeting of the D. A. R. Juniors, held at Continental Hall.

Miss Helen Bunten, of Takoma Park, was elected national corresponding secretary of the organization and Miss Harriet Parkes, head of the local Constitution Chapter of the Juniors, received one of the prizes awarded for increase in membership.

Mrs. Margaret Carr Rites Tomorrow

Mrs. Margaret Carr, 79, widow of William E. Carr, former District building inspector, died yesterday at her home, 1337 Kearney street northwest.

A native of Ireland, Mrs. Carr had lived in Washington for 64 years. She is survived by three sons, William P., T. Powderly and J. Edwin Carr; four daughters, Mrs. Anna B. Booth and the Misses Margaret M., Catherine A. and Evelyn Carr, and a sister, Mrs. Annie Wheeler, all of Washington, also eight grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held from the home at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow, followed by requiem mass at 9 a. m. in St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Brookland. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

U. S. Rubber Head's Salary Is $150,000, Pension Is $75,000

Jersey City, April 19 (AP).—Francis B. Davis, jr., 54, president of United States Rubber Co. since 1929, virtually had the rest of his life's work laid out for him today by the company's stockholders.

The stockholders, at the annual meeting, approved a contract whereby he remains as chairman and president for six years at an annual salary of $150,000.

The contract, retroactive to January 1, is renewable at the company's option from January 1, 1944, to January 1, 1949.

Bridges Attacks TVA Inquiry Bar

By the Associated Press.

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, a leader in the fight for an inevestigation of the Tennessee Valley Authority, contended last night "the Roosevelt Administration" had kept him from being a member of a joint Congressional investigating committee.

Bridges' charge came shortly after Vice President Garner had appointed Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, to the committee, and Davis, at Uniontown, Pa., had announced he would accept. The acceptance completed personnel of the ten-man committee.
